PETERSON GOES BACK TO LAW

Former Attorney-General Leslie Peterson announced today he is rejoining his old Vancouver law firm, but left his options open concerning any provincial byelections or his future leadership of the Social Credit party.

Peterson said he is going back to the firm of Boughton, Street, Collins, Dunfee, Craig and Mortimer where he will be a senior partner. He was with the firm before he entered politics in 1956.

Peterson said it is "necessary to earn a living" but said he will not make a firm decision on running in a provincial byelection until a seat becomes vacant.

He said he is "honored" by the invitiation from former premier Bennett that Peterson run in Bennett's South Okanagan riding and become the next Socred leader.

"But the fact is that there is no seat available," Peterson said. "When a seat does become available, I will be prepared to answer the question at that time."

'Skin-Saving' Socreds Back NDP

By BRIAN BUTTERS and CLEMENT CHAPPLE

The NDP government got unexpected support from the Social Credit party Thursday when the legislature adopted the speech from the throne.

In what Premier Barrett termed an exercise in "political skin-saving," the 10 Socreds rose with the NDP when the vote was taken. The Liberals and Progressive Conservatives opposed the motion.

Opposition Leader W. A. C. Bennett had a different reason for the Socreds' support — he called it an example of "co-operation and goodwill" by his party.

The debate on the speech from the throne took a total of seven hours, with speakers from all four parties participating.

It included defeat of a non-confidence motion from the Socreds, which expressed regret that the speech did not contain legislation for producing jobs, for encouraging secondary industry and for the promotion of B.C. agricultural products.

The vote on the amendment resulted in the combined opposition parties voting against the government.

The two-day debate was highlighted by criticisms from both sides of the house of the arguments put forward, particularly with respect to statements made by Premier Barrett about the government's intended takeover of B.C. Tel and two gas transmission companies.

Industrial Development Minister Alex Macdonald said during the debate Thursday that B.C. should perhaps have an "economic advisory council" to help create economic policies for the province.

Macdonald said the idea is not government policy but the government wants a discussion of the whole problem of industry and employment and must come up with some new "appraisal procedure."

Macdonald said he believes it is important not to rush into industry aid programs without research and planning.

"We want to know the kinds of industry that should be helped," Macdonald said.

Phyllis Young (NDP — Vancouver Little Mountain) told the legislature the time has come for a major study to be made of the significance of jobs.

In her first address to the house, Ms. Young said a job should not necessarily have to produce a profit for someone, that it should instead be designed to create some social gain.

With an expanding labor force and a diminishing job market, she said, the time must be taken to find out what role jobs are to play in the future of the province.

In response to criticism from the opposition parties that the government had included nothing in the throne speech dealing with jobs, Ms. Young said there has not been time in the 35 days since the government took office to create a blueprint for jobs.

Allan Williams (L. — West Vancouver-Howe Sound) called for the government to establish a legislative committee to meet representatives of labor and business to discuss the future of the province in terms of what is necessary to keep it moving.

Williams said the place to

Striker Welfare On Way

Rehabilitation Minister Norman Levi said Thursday the NDP government will introduce legislation next spring that would allow for welfare payments to striking and locked-out workers.

Levi made the statement in the legislative corridors when commenting on a Supreme Court of Canada ruling that such workers are not entitled to payments under B.C.'s present legislation.

Levi said that the government is committed to providing welfare when there is need, and the fact that workers are locked out or striking should not affect the definition of need.

The court ruling came in the case of Ross Alden, a Vancouver insulation mechanic whose lawyer was former NDP leader Tom Berger, now a B.C. Supreme Court judge.

The former government took the attitude that strikers should not get payments, Levi noted.

But the NDP believes that "if people are in need we want to help them."

"At that time (the Alden case) our party took the position that the government could in fact give support to strikers and locked-out workers," Levi told reporters.

"Now that a ruling has been brought down by the courts it's obvious that we'll have to look at changing the legislation."

Lewis Predicts NDP Gains

Times News Services

Lewis "has struck a note that others have been forced to respond to," said T. C. Douglas, former NDP leader and candidate for re-election in Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands, when he welcomed Lewis to Nanaimo.

"We are doing very well across the country," Lewis said, predicting many more New Democrats will be elected to the Commons in the Oct. 30 general election. The NDP had 25 MPs at dissolution.

Today Lewis continued his tour of B.C. making stops at Port Alberni and Vancouver.

At Rimouski, Que., Real Caouette, federal Social Credit leader, was challenged by a heckler who said separation from Canada is the only route for Quebec to follow.

"Everybody knows Quebec is not a province like the others just as Alberta is different from Nova Scotia and Ontario is different from Newfoundland," Caouette said.

"We must give the provinces the liberty to act within Canada, while providing them with the means to do so."

The whole wrangle over bilingualism could be resolved if the federal government made sufficient subsidies available to the provinces so that both languages could be taught from Grade 1, he added.

One journalist with the Stanfield party, Wang Chang-Yun of the New China News Agency, was not permitted to make the journey from Charlottetown.

Conservative party officials said Wang, who represents the official mainland Chinese news agency, was refused entry by U.S. immigration officials.

Meanwhile, Prime Minister Trudeau has told his former cabinet colleague Eric Kierans that he should continue to work within the Liberal party to seek to persuade more Liberals to accept the Kierans' point of view.

"But I hope that you will not take a lack of agreement with your point of view on a given issue as an indication of any less concern for the integrity of Canada than that which you yourself possess," said the prime minister in a letter released Thursday.

He released the text of his reply to a letter he received last week from Kierans.

War to Death In Ulster, Craig Vows

Times News Services

"We are going to war in Ulster," a hardline Protestant leader said Thursday in London, and 1,000 more people will die in the embattled province between now and Christmas, he added.

William Craig, a former cabinet minister in Ulster's suspended government said he and his supporters were willing "to fight to the death" to preserve Ulster's British heritage.

"The future of Ulster will be decided by bullets — not ballots," he told a Conservative Club meeting.

"We are set on a course of civil war so horrible that you and I can hardly understand it," he told his stunned audience.

Craig added that "without boasting I can mobilize tomorrow 80,000 men who will not see any compromise in Ulster."

One other leader of the movement described the speech as "the language of lunacy."

Meanwhile, Reuters news agency said there was a report, which sources close to the British army said probably was true, that Protestants of the UDA indulged in collusion with members of the IRA, which draws its support from the Roman Catholic community. The UDA denied the report.

Reuters quoted reliable sources as saying that UDA leaders and representatives of the Official wing of the IRA arranged a meeting in a Belfast hotel last Sunday.

But the meeting — at which both sides were said to have reached agreement on the necessity to end middle class domination of politics in Ulster — was also reported to have been infiltrated by the more militant provisional wing of the IRA.

The Provisionals are actively fighting British forces but the officials still are respecting a truce reached last summer.

RESTAURANT PRICES TO GO UP 10 PCT.

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Most restaurant prices in Victoria and Vancouver will go up 10 per cent next week on the day the provincial government raises the minimum wage to $2 per hour.

When the minimum wage goes to $2.25 per hour on Jan. 1, 1974, menu prices will likely go up an additional 5 per cent, plus another 5 per cent when it goes to $2.50 per hour in June, 1974.

Gordon Schoor, president of the Victoria and Southern Vancouver Island branch of the Canadian Restaurant Association, said today restaurants were faced with a choice of raising prices or cutting staff.

He said the decision to raise menu rates was taken at a meeting in Vancouver of mainland and Vancouver Island restaurant officials.

Marcos Planning Power for Life

By LEE LESCAZE
Washington Post

HONG KONG — President Ferdinand Marcos will have the legal authority to rule the Philippines as long as he chooses and there never need be future national elections, according to a key article of the nation's new draft constitution, the Washington Post learned Thursday.

The article also specifically gives constitutional approval to all Marcos' decrees issued in the almost four weeks since he imposed martial law throughout the Phillipines.

The martial law administration has made no public announcement about the article, which appears to observers to be the ultimate result of Marcos' many months of work to get a new constitution to his liking drafted by the constitutional convention.

Before martial law, the convention was moving very slowly toward completing its work, and there was widespread speculation that it was under pressure from the president to extend all present terms of office until 1975.

It appears that convention work has been greatly speeded since martial law was imposed and the new "transitory provisions article" would extend all terms indefinitely. The article was passed by a convention committee Tuesday and will be submitted to the full convention next week, according to well-informed sources.

Ballard Jailed

TORONTO (CP) — Harold Edwin Ballard, president of Maple Leaf Gardens and a governor of the National Hockey League, was sentenced today to three years in Kingston penitentiary.

Ballard, 69, was sentenced to three years on each of two counts — one of theft and one of fraud — involving 47 individual charges.

The president of the Toronto Maple Leaf hockey club will serve a total of three years since the sentences run concurrently.

Your Federal Candidates

HANSEN
Victoria

By ROGER STONEBANKS
Times Staff

The New Democratic Party has never won Victoria federal constituency.

But that isn't daunting 25-year-old Flemming Hansen, the Danish-born University of Victoria economics and political science student now working full-time on the campaign.

He points to steadily increasing party support over the last decade which reached 9,414 votes in the 1968 election, or 20 per cent of the total constituency votes cast.

He describes the improvement as "from hopeless to at least a respectable third" and the party's 1968 showing was "despite Trudeaumania."

Sitting beneath a poster headed Relevant Socialism, with photographs of former NDP-CCF leaders J. S. Woodsworth, M. J. Coldwell and T. C. Douglas, he adds: "If that trend continues . . ."

To Hansen, sincere, quick-spoken and brimming with enthusiasm, "it looks damn good. The question is: Is it enough to win. We have got to pick up 4,000 to 5,000 votes to win."

He predicts that David Groos, the Liberal who won in 1968 with 18,401 votes, will lose at least 5,000 to 6,000 votes.

"I think I've got a good chance of picking them up," he said.

Hansen predicts the Progressive Conservatives will remain "fairly stable:" making Groos the "man to beat." In the last election, the Tories polled 13,578 votes.

Hansen, however, doesn't emphasize his chances of success. It was his last commment, in response to a question,

LINDHOLM
Esquimalt-Saanich

By GEORGE OAKE
Times Staff

The color co-ordinated anteroom of Pearlman and Lindholm, barristers and solicitors, has the rich texture of an Amazon rain forest. Wood and stone meld with yellow broadloom producing what can only be described as the opulence of the law.

Even the receptionist's dress is co-ordinated.

When the muted telephone gives forth with its gurgling birdsong one half expects to see a brilliant macaw fly out of the indirect lighting.

All this is the lair of Esquimalt-Saanich Liberal candidate Louis Lindholm — a senior partner in Vancouver Island's largest law firm — and a man who wants to go to Ottawa in the worst way.

"I've had a fair output out of this community so I feel it is my social, personal responsibility to put an input back into it," Lindholm said.

That's the kind of statement a good courtroom lawyer like the Liberal candidate could dissect in a few minutes of cross-examination. But political pablum or not, the candidate has had a fork in a number of local pies.

As president of the Victoria Bar Society, a six-year director of Kiwanis Village — "That's a million dollar complex which is giving shelter and comfort to the aged" — and president of the Saanich Peninsula Hospital Society, Lindholm has paid his community dues.

A cynic might add that such dues reap political receipts,

Hire More French—Report

By CLANDE LEMELIN

MONTREAL — Canadians who do not speak French would only get 15 per cent of the high-level government appointments during the next three years if Ottawa pursues its official goals on bilingualism.

This explosive conclusion highlights a secret treasury board report on language patterns in the so-called "mandarin class" that rules the public service.

The report states that bilingual percentage targets for 1975 announced last year by treasury board president C. M. Drury cannot possibly be met unless the government orders a complete reversal of the French-English ration in its recruiting.

"Despite all the directives on bilingualism and all the controversy since 1966, we have been unable to find any significant progress in the executive category of the public service," the document says.

The crash program is needed "urgently" to give French-Canadians more senior appointments and to promote four times fewer officials who speak English only over the next three years, the task force concludes.

Copies of this report and of several others drafted by treasury board officials during the past six months were obtained by the Montreal newspaper Le Devoir and the findings were made available to the Victoria Times.

Officials examined the implications of a statement of government policy that Drury made in the House of Commons March 9, 1971.

The minister announced that by 1975, at least 60 per cent and perhaps more of senior officials in the national capital region and in about 50 bilingual districts to be designated later will have to be bilingual.

For administrative and outside jobs, the target was set at 50 per cent; for secretaries and other support staff, 35 per cent; for professionals, scientists and technicians, 15 per cent.

In a report dated May 27, 1972, the task force stated that the "bilingual ratio" in the executive category stood at 32.6 per cent at the end of last year and that the figure

Gov't Aircraft In for Changes

Replacement and upgrading of the provincial government's aircraft will likely result from a study ordered by Highways Minister Bob Strachan.

Strachan said today he has called for a report from his own department, the lands department and B.C. Hydro with recommendations for upgrading the service.

The provincial government maintains nine aircraft, five in the highways department, three in the lands department and one with B.C. Hydro.

Some of the planes are 20 and 30 years old, Strachan said, and the government has found they spend more time on the ground undergoing tests of air worthiness than flying on government business.

He said all the planes are safe, but that ministry of transport tests are required more and more often to keep the planes in the air.

The highways minister said it is likely some of the planes will be replaced with new models and the government can probably get by with fewer aircraft.

All the planes will be brought under a single administrative unit, he said, with himself, Resources Minister Bob Williams and B.C. Hydro director and Municipal Affairs Minister Jim Lorimer responsible.

One of the steps likely to be taken in the upgrading process, he said, will be pressurization of the planes so that flights can be made in mountainous areas of the province without passengers and crew using oxygen masks.

Strachan said the matter of government aircraft has become a "politically sensitive thing." He made an apparent reference to former Social Credit minister Phil Gaglardi in saying: "It is unfortunate that a former minister of the Crown chose to make the aircraft his personal plaything."

The planes, four-, five- and six-seat craft, include Beechcraft, Beaver and Otter types.

Strachan said about 3,000 flights per year are made by government personnel within the highways department alone.

VANDALS DEMOLISH 187 NEW AUTOS

Polkce estimated damage at $200,000.

When the drivers tired of head-on and broadside collisions, they crashed the unsold 1973 models into a wood-and-chain link fence.

G. J. Kramer, regional sales manager, said a security guard was supposed to be guarding the cars which had been left with keys in the ignition for delivery to dealers.

Kierans in that letter advised Trudeau that because of the Liberal economic policies he could not bring himself to support Trudeau in the Oct. 30 election.

Mr. Kierans said that while he would not vote for Trudeau in the prime minister's own constituency of Mount Royal where Kierans resides. He would vote instead for the New Democratic Party candidate. Kierans said however that he remained a Liberal.

Another former Liberal cabinet minister — Paul Hellyer, now Conservative candidate in Toronto Trinity — attacked the Trudeau government on Thursday also — for its "last minute election promises" which he claimed would cost every working man $60 next year.

Campaigning in Alberta, Finance Minister John Turner said control of the country's fiscal policies by big government, labor and business must be altered to give small business a voice.

He told a Calgary news conference the government has helped small business by tax cuts and loans and could announce new benefits by next week.

Bilingual Goal 'Impossible'

will drop if current promotion trends continue.

Here are the main findings:

—Of the 610 top officials in federal departments and agencies, only 88 were Francophones, a proportion of 14.4 per cent;

—French Canadians, who make up 27 per cent of the population, were badly underrepresented at all levels of the public service, despite heavy publicity about "French power" since Pierre Trudeau became prime minister;

—The Francophone executives were all bilingual, but only one worked outside Quebec and the national capital region. Among the 522 Anglophone officials, only 18 per cent were bilingual;

—Francophone executives were heavily concentrated in departments that deal with a large number of taxpayers and spread thinly in key agencies that formulate Canada's economic and foreign policies;

—Of the 142 executives recruited from outside the public service from 1966 to 1971, only 27 (19 per cent) were French speaking;

—Of the 269 public servants promoted into the executive category in the same period, only 42 (16 per cent) were French-speaking. The Francophones' share of the promotions actually dropped from 26 per cent in the last year of the Lester Pearson administration to 13 per cent in the fiscal year ended March 31, 1971;

—Among the Anglophones promoted to senior posts in the five-year period, only 10 per cent were bilingual. Of the Anglophones recruited outside the public service, 15 per cent were bilingual.

The task force comments that Drury's goals for 1975 are "illusions" unless a radical new recruitment program is adopted immediately.

The quota figures have come under fierce opposition from English-speaking public servants who see them as a direct threat to their career prospects. This issue has dominated the campaign for the Oct. 30 federal election in the Ottawa Valley and in New Brunswick, two regions with a large Francophone minority.

Drury faces considerable resentment against his bilingual policies in his own riding of Westmount (Montreal), which is about 80 per cent English-speaking.

The task force recommended "an urgent manpower strategy" to give French-speaking taxpayers "an adequate numerical representation" in the upper echelons of the federal bureaucracy.

Speech: Socred Join NDP

discuss the economy of the province is not in the cabinet chambers but in legislative committee rooms.

He said the main objection of the Liberal party to the government's action is the carelessness and lack of caution displayed by the premier in his remarks to the press.

Williams said he is concerned that Barrett's remarks about takeover of B.C. Tel and other companies were not made by mistake but on purpose.

The Liberal said "the government doesn't know where it is going" and that it should have allowed members to discuss the serious questions of the economy and unemployment by including them in the throne speech.

Dean Smith (SC — North Peace) called for the government to create a low-interest loan fund to enable farmers of the Peace River area to establish an alfalfa processing plant and to enable meat packaging operations to continue in the area.

CANNERY

Smith also said the proposed fish cannery at Port Simpson, to which the previous government promised financial support, has been ignored so far by the NDP government.

The Socred said an "atmosphere of certainty" is needed in order for investors to have confidence in the province and that such an atmosphere is being effectively "wiped out" by government statements.

"We want an atmosphere where the people will be ready to buy back B.C.," Smith said. "This cannot be done by shaking the confidence of investors."

REAL EMERGENCY

Dr. Scott Wallace (PC — Oak Bay) complained that the current emergency session would only deal with specific measures selected by the government.

"If this emergency session is really necessary, it should consider the greatest emergency in this province, which is unemployment."

Wallace referred to proposed government legislation, apparently singling out the NDP's promised pension increase and said "these measures will not help the people they are intended to help."

Wallace said despite his party's support for the nonconfidence motion before the house, he was critical of Social Credit attacks against the government.

HITS SOCREDS

"Time and time again we hear from the official opposition about creating jobs for secondary industry. Today it is asking the socialists to do what it didn't do," he said.

Switching his attack to the government, Wallace agreed that "35 days is a short time" for any government to make dramatic changes, but he was curious "where the Toyota car situation rests now."

Chris Darcy (NDP—Rossland-Trail), making his maiden speech in the legislature, said the federal Liberals and the former Social Credit government had done nothing about unemployment.

He added that both governments were more interested in helping foreign shareholders and aiding in the export of Canada's raw materials.

OPPOSITION EYED

Fixing his eyes on the opposition benches he added, "For a party that used to pride itself on mainstreeting you should go back to your ridings and talk to the voters. I know how they voted and that's why there are 38 members on this side of the house."

Those opposition members who predict "the rack and ruin of the economy" under an NDP administration were out of line, he said.

"Any information we have on the economy relates to last July, not October," he concluded.

Pat Jordan (SC — North Okanagan) said the government were acting like "a bunch of kids in the cookie jar."

She charged Barrett with using his office as a "shooting gallery" and said his attitude is "destroying a free society."

NO UNDERSTANDING

She said Barrett's first 35 days in government have demonstrated that he has "no understanding" of economics.

"Your basic approach is to be plugged into Santa Claus," she said.

Highways Minister Robert Strachan spent half an hour haranguing the Social Credit members for criticising the new government.

Strachan said the Socreds had 20 years in which to accomplish the same things they were admonishing the NDP for not including in the throne speech.

He called it a "shoddy, shameful, two-faced exhibition," and said the blame for the province's problems should be put "where it belongs — with the previous administration."

Strachan called the Socreds "hurt, bewildered, divided and lost" and said the tragedy of the matter is that the previous government was not one with 20 years' experience but one with "one year's experience repeated 20 times over.

The former NDP leader said the Socreds had done nothing to encourage secondary and tertiary industry in the province, had continued to exploit natural resources and had voted against an NDP move to establish a $200-a-month old age pension in the last session of the house.

Mystery Ducks Part Of Dead-End Species

Back in the 1820's a mottled-brown rather nondescript duck was shot in one of the maze of bays which mark where sea and land blend to form the southern coast of the State of Louisiana. About 50 years later, on a remote Pacific island 800 miles south of Hawaii, two similar but smaller ducks fell to the guns of collectors.

The Louisiana bird became a North American ornithological mystery for decades. Shot by no less than John James Audubon, the illustrious artist, and subsequently recorded for posterity in one of his remarkable paintings, it became known to some as the Bimaculated Duck. To others it was Brewer's Duck. Brewer was a contemporary of Audubon's and a personal friend.

ONLY EVIDENCE

The strange part of this story is that Audubon's painting was the only evidence that the duck had ever existed. The bimaculated duck was never seen again. Had Audubon's well-known over-active imagination been at work, or had he inadvertently ended the line for some already-dying species?

Before we try to answer these questions, let's jump 5000 miles across the world to a tiny dot of land in the mid-Pacific called Washington Island. There, in 1874, gunners apparently ended the line for a little-known race of ducks whose range was restricted to that one small island.

About the size of a teal, and subsequently known as Coues' Duck after another well-known ornithologist of the time, they, like their Louisiana brother, left no living representatives.

BLOOD RELATIVES

While the similarity of their stories might be enough to bind these two apparently unrelated incidents together, they were in fact bound by blood. Both the so-called bimaculated duck and Coues' duck were blood relatives, offshoots of cosmpolitan stock, the well-known gadwall.

The bird Audubon shot turned out to be a product of the mating of a mallard and a gadwall. Coues' duck, on the other hand, was a genetic dead-end which had somehow become isolated from the parent genetic pool to degenerate into a pint-sized clan of its own.

I was reminded of these two incidents last Saturday when my wanderings took me to that mainland waterfowl mecca, the Fraser River Delta, to the Reifel Waterfowl Refuge specifically.

On one of the many cattail-bordered ponds that dot the refuge a "mottled-brown rather nondescript" duck floated nervously. I say nervously because the thump of shotguns at work filled the air around the refuge and the gleaming legs of my camera tripod must have looked mightly suspicious to the bird.

WHITE FLASHES

Before I had a chance to be sure of its identity, it had sprung almost vertically from the water and with a flash of white on each wing, departed for quieter waters. Fortunately those white flashes were the bird's calling card. They were the field marks of a gadwall in flight, the first gadwall I'd seen since leaving the prairies.

Despite their cosmpollitan status, only Australia and South America have been denied their presence. Gadwalls are not common in British Columbia. A few nest near lakes in the interior and a few more winter in the marshes of the southwest coast but on Vancouver Island their appearance is enough to generate some excitement among the local bird-watching fraternity.

COMBINED EFFORTS

Last winter, for example, the combined efforts of some of Victoria's most intrepid birders could do no better than turn up 13 gadwalls in the area.

Gadwalls are living proof that there's a limit to what one can do with words when describing a bird, particularly when the words are mottled, streaked, brown and grey.

In the case of the gadwall, the colors themselves are not so important as the way they are arranged, interwoven and mixed to produce as they do a beautifully delicate mosaic of color.

The resulting patterns do not make the gadwall the easiest dck in the world to identify. Fortunately, when all else fails those white patches, called the specula, on the rear-centre of each wing, are like a trade mark. The gadwall is the only duck with white specula.

'Fair Price' Assured B.C. Tel Shareholders

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE
Times Staff

Shareholders will get a fair market price and company employees will be protected when B.C. Tel is taken over by the provincial government, Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said Thursday.

Macdonald was speaking to a non-confidence motion in the throne speech debate in the legislature.

At the same time, he blasted what he called the "sensational and extravagant" news reporting of an earlier statement by Premier Barrett about the eventual takeover of B.C. Tel.

"The newspapers reported losses on paper in the millions but the papers did that themselves by sensational and extravagant reporting."

Macdonald called the Barrett statement, given Oct. 12 at a news conference with financial reporters, a "non-event."

STOP FIDDLING

However, Garde Gardom (L—Vancouver-Point Grey) warned the government against becoming a "takeover bureaucracy" and told the government to stop "fiddling around with the economy."

Gardom said Barrett's statements are giving the province the "heebie jeebies" by making them think that B.C. was going to become "one single gelatinous mass of government."

The attorney-general termed criticisms of Barrett's economic statements the "strident voices of panic-mongers" — a reference to speeches Wednesday by

Macdonald told the legislature that "Yes . . . we intend to achieve that proud social objective" of taking over the telephone company.

NO PANIC

The method will be by way of "easy does it, no rush, no panic," he said.

"We will enlist the aid of B.C. Tel employees," and shareholders will get a "fair market value for their investments."

The price paid for B.C. Tel by the government will not be a value "depressed by sensational stories," he added.

He asked why British Columbians should be "paying tribute to a vast multi-national corporation beyond our borders." Macdonald, who is also B.C.'s industrial development minister, characerized the reaction to Barrett's statement by New York investment houses by saying "the peasants are getting restless again."

He said he wished the Liberal party would "have faith" in the province and he said the Socred opposition "expects us to do in four weeks what they failed to do in 20 years."

DEFEATED

Gardom's criticisms came following the defeat of the Social Credit party's non-confidence motion, during continuation of the throne speech debate.

He said Premier Barrett should not get "steamed up" about B.C. Tel when the province has higher priorities, such as acting against the highest crime and drug rate in the country.

Gardom said he believes that Barrett's statements about the takeover were "something that was well designed."

He said Barrett should state how long the shareholders would have to wait "for their fate" and he should spell out what will be the form of the takeover.

Shareholders should not have to sit by their television sets "all day long" and wait for Barrett to finally make a press statement about the takeover.

Gardom called B.C. Tel a "good corporate citizen."

"Bring us social reforms," he said to Barrett, "but please don't over-govern and don't over-control and don't overburden the people of B.C. with a stifling philosophy."

"Don't get into business," he said, "because you'll muck it up."

B.C. VOTERS UP 231,777

VANCOUVER (CP) — Preliminary figures show a total of 1,291,736 British Columbians eligible to vote in the general election Oct. 30, an increase of 231,777 over the number eligible to cast ballots in the 1968 election.

The number of polls has been increased to at least 5,988 from the 4,776 listed in 1968. The figure includes advance polls but will change as returning officers make final decisions on split and combined polls.

A Window on the Lagoon

There can be little doubt that the 650-acre Royal Roads property on Esquimalt Lagoon would make an excellent recreational park. It was laid out for private enjoyment and recreation and it would equally serve the public in this way too. The suggestion of Times columnist Jack Scott that "upwards of half a million people" could enjoy the area is a little sobering in these days when public use of parks is of necessity being examined with a view to saving the parks from the people. But the general idea is an attractive one.

One complication, of course, is that the property is being used as a military college — and a good one — and the dual uses of park and college can overlap only slightly. The public is now able to enjoy the gardens at specified times, but the park proposal envisages much greater utilization. The obstacle would be overcome if an adequate alternate site, with up-to-date buildings and equipment, were to be provided. If equivalent quality in training could be given, there should be no great objection to such a move.

The catch would come in any consideration of finances. Since the Royal Roads property belongs to the nation, it could hardly be given gratis to one small community, particularly if an alternative college site had also to be bought and improved. And if the initial cost hurdle could be surmounted, there would be the cost of upkeep.

It is obvious that gardens such as the park displays need a staff of experts and large outlays of money for other purposes as well. Which local authority would undertake this sizable expense? The Capital Regional Board? The provincial parks branch? And would the public be willing to undertake the costs at a level which would maintain the grounds in their present excellent state?

The experience of local authorities has not been such as to inspire great confidence that this could be generously handled. The plight of Thetis Lake Park is a case in point, with upkeep at a bare minimum, and city reluctance delaying a regional take-over. The park remains in a perilous situation without real protection against dismemberment.

There are, then, a few questions to be answered in regard to Royal Roads. Desirability is only one of the factors. In the wider view, we are greatly indebted to the federal government for having preserved the property. If Ottawa had not assumed ownership, is it likely that the property would still be there today — kept beautiful, un-subdivided, and at least partially open to the public? Before we change this situation we had better make sure that it will be a guaranteed, air-tight, gold-plated change for the better, with no future danger of subdivision, powerline easements, logging contracts or mines.

Valuable Peacetime Service

It is a sign of the times in this community that rival aspirants for the Esquimalt-Saanich federal seat, whatever their other differences, seem united on one point at least—the desirability of expanding peacetime service of the naval arm along coast guard lines, with emphasis on fisheries patrol and search-and-rescue.

Liberal Louis Lindholm, apparently better informed on the matter than his opponents, has noted the degree to which the naval arm is involved in coast guard work during peacetime, but seems to have no objection to broadening the service.

The attitude of the various party standard-bearers draws pointed attention to a change in the sentiment once expressed on the question by Navy spokesmen here. Some years ago the latter argued that the technical training of members of their force was so demanding—and so specialized—that little time or opportunity was afforded for the peacetime duties of a coast guard. They were then Navy and Navy they would remain, without intrusion into other fields.

A combination of circumstances has brought about a changing viewpoint. And CFB Esquimalt has done excellent work in what used to be air-sea-rescue as well as other duties divorced from those of a combat force. In today's climate, however, lacking that specialized character "when the trooper's on the tide," taxpaying citizens look for something additional from their investment to spit-and-polish or even technical excellence in the transitory phases of preparations for warfare.

If the naval forces can provide that extra dividend, then, as many of its senior members know, the image will shine more brightly in the public's eyes. The position of federal election candidates here reflects that attitude.

Wrong Readers

Depending on the individual's risibility, it is possible to speak in anger or merely to chuckle about the mix-up which placed in some provincial public schools a book on Russia tailored for American cold-war tastes instead of the British version which the department of education ordered and which did not contain the grotesquely slanted writing. The text can be useful only as an example of the ways in which national propaganda can be manipulated.

Mein Kampf prevailed as a sort of Bible at one period of German history — and simultaneously became the book of evil in other parts of the world. Henry Ford presented the belief that "History is bunk" and Nietzsche designated history as a "belief in falsehood." Any similarities between the German and Allied histories of the First World War are said to have been purely coincidental.

History, it seems, is like beauty — in the eye of the beholder. But attempts to carry on the already discredited "cold war" between the United States and Russia have no place in Canadian school books. Somebody didn't check delivery of the goods very carefully.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Pressure

"King Moves to End Sandringham Strike." So says a big headline in the Times.

It sounds like the opening move of a power play to force the hospital to rehire strikers it doesn't want and doesn't need.

It is probable that the hospital will be forced to surrender. It has too many enemies to resist the pressure much longer.

First there's Labor Minister King. He's a minister of the crown, and presumably a servant of the people with a responsibility to the public to see that justice is done. But he's a union man, so it's plain to see where his sympathies will be.

Then there's Prime Minister Barrett, who has marched in CUPE's picket line. So naturally his influence is on the side of the union.

Then there is the Labor Relations Board — a public body supposed to be impartial, but . . .

Then there's CUPE, a union determined to employ any means, legal or illegal, to force the hospital to employ the union strikers.

With enemies like these, what chance has the hospital of obtaining justice?

Even the law has turned against them. The LRB claims that the hospital "has not bargained collectively with the union." To "bargain collectively in good faith" is merely union jargon for "refusing to give in to union demands."

So the end of the strike is probably in sight. With a ring of enemies like these the hospital has as much chance of surviving the onslaught as a helpless lamb surrounded by ravening wolves.

Of course there will be advantages. There will be no more bullets fired into the fuel storage tanks; no more footsteps in the snow to where the main valve for the fuel line was shut off, as happened last winter leaving the hospital without heat; no more sabotage of hospital property; no more intimidation of hospital employees; no more attempts by CUPE to stop the supply of fuel, and food, and milk to the hospital.

In short there'll be labor peace. But at what a price!

Imagine the atmosphere in a hospital manned by malcontent strikers whom the patients don't want, the staff doesn't want and the management doesn't want!

This is justice, NDP style?—Maurice Rookwood, 2464 Plumer.

Motives

The motives of the average Liberal and his leaders are neither better nor worse than those of any other party despite their failure to deal effectively with either unemployment or inflation. The trouble lies, not in any lack of goodwill, but in a blind faith that capitalism is a fact of nature rather than a choice to which there are alternatives. This view is also shared by the Conservatives who still seem to regard free enterprise as sacred dogma.

Our country has never faced greater difficulties than those now before it and I do not claim that the NDP has all the answers. All I maintain is that the old-line parties have demonstrated their inability to deal with them so why not try a party which at least offers a new approach to our problems.

Canada reminds me of the man who fired his office boy for inefficiency, found his replacement equally hopeless so turned around and hired back the first. Wouldn't it be more sensible to try someone else?—F. L. P. Anderson, 23-1180 Colville Rd.

Visa Denied

The Prime Minister will by now be aware of Mr. Mackasey's decision to deny a visa to Dr. Istvan Meszaros, recently appointed to a position at York University. Unless the government is able to give very good reason for this denial it must appear to all an unreasonable and illiberal act, and, were it not for the human claims involved, an almost comic return to the insecure scenarios of the fifties. If the government has good reason for its action, it is necessary that these reasons be spelled out clearly and in detail, as befitting a Liberal and Just Society's treatment of persons. If the government is not able to do this, that is, if it has no good reason to exclude Dr. Meszaros from our community, we shall look for Mr. Trudeau's reversal of Mr. Mackasey's decision. — R. G. Beehler, C. B. Daniels, A. R. Drengson, H. J. N. Horsburgh, E. W. Kluge, J. M. Michelsen, K. W. Rankin, John Woods, Philosophy Dept., University of Victoria.

Responsibility

I arrived in the lovely city of Victoria on Friday afternoon, and was struck with the feature item on your front page, "An Apology for the Queen."

The student council is then reported to have apologized to the Queen. Why the student council? In the whole report no intimation is given of any real concern by the administration of Stirling University. They are the responsible culprits.

ELIZABETH II

Under the subterfuge of academic freedom, academic perversion is practised. Out of the despair of some of the prevailing social and economic theories, distrust, disdain and destruction are taught by some of the faculty. The students do not spontaneously generate these ideas, but are taught them by selective indoctrination.

In my experience, the students are open to discuss alternatives to many of the theories taught in classes. It is the faculty who generally resent questioning or criticism.

I hope that the official inquiry reports the root of the trouble. Incidentally, if it would be of interest, Christianity just could have some valid answers to the human dilemma.—Charles Henricks, 1636 Bayview Dr., Muskegon, Michigan.

Mail Losses

I wish to report the loss of several parcels of envelopes and special Canadian post cards over the period April 15 to September 1, 1972, in the incoming mail to Ottawa, Ontario. The full magnitude of the missing parcels was not appreciated until I had returned from holidays in September and I began to check with various collectors and stamp clubs of the RPSC as to the location of certain philatelic items and coloured slide programs.

I request the assistance of your readers in locating the missing material if any should be offered to them for sale. I offer an award of $100 Canadian to the person who first provides me with facts or material that leads to the apprehension and conviction of whoever may have removed my mail from the Canadian Post Office Department.

The most easily identified material is as follows:

(a) At least three cancelled sets of the 90 coloured Canadian post cards dated 24 July, 1972 at the House of Commons, Ottawa, Ontario. The cancellation is in green ink and the cards are not addressed.

(b) 12 cancelled sets of post cards of the applicable provinces all dated 24 July, 1972 — Quebec City, Quebec (3 series of 12 sets); Edmonton, Alberta (2 series of 12 sets); and Dawson City, Yukon (1 series of 12 sets).

(c) Assorted 1971 and 1972 first day covers of recent Canadian stamps, including coils, booklets, $1.00 and $2.00 stamps, and 40 Western Canada Airways Covers 1928-1929 autographed by the famous bush pilot, Punch Dickins.

(d) At least four coloured slide programs of the Royal Philatelic Society of Canada: Program No. 31 Holy Land Postal History 1850-1950 (90 slides); Program No. 39 Canadian Air Mail Stamps Regular and Varieties (90 slides); Program No. 46 Scouting on stamps (74 slides); Program No. 47 Famous People in Canadian History (51 slides). All these programs are in 35 mm Kodak plastic boxes. Each program has a special RPSC slide introduction, title and ending.

The cumulative number of losses indicates that the losses are not by chance and that they are in the Ottawa area. The losses have been reported by the senders and myself to postal authorities but as yet no trace of the losses has been found. Parcels registered or insured were received safely but not those that were sent by ordinary means. Several letters were also taken indicating that money was being sought.

I trust that my problem will serve as a reminder to all stamp collectors to be sure to insure their parcels or register their material. The small cost of the special protection not only provides reimbursement if a loss occurs but also seems to prevent brazen theft from the mails. With malice toward none, including the Canadian Post Office system in Ottawa, I strongly urge any collector sending valuable items to the Ottawa area to insure or register their material until an answer is obtained concerning my losses.

The $100 reward will stand until the responsible person is identified, apprehended and convicted for these apparent thefts. — R. K. Malott, Major, 16 Hardwick Crescent, Ottawa, K2H 6R1.

Gratitude

Recently, my wife and I spent a three-day vacation in your fair city. We would like, through you, to express our thanks to the many people who helped to make our stay so pleasant. We remember with fondness and pleasure the courtesy of your citizens, and the charm, beauty and cleanliness of your city.

It is refreshing to see a city and people who take great pride in preserving their past heritage. We were enchanted with Trounce Alley and Bastion Square as well as the Butchart Gardens. This is not to slight the rest of your lovely city.

Again, our deepest thanks for a delightful and restful vacation.—John and Paula Nelson, 4700 SW Dogwood Dr., Lake Oswego, Oregon.

MAURICE WESTERN

The High Cost of Elections

OTTAWA — The department of corporate and consumer affairs exists, according to the book of estimates, "to optimize the welfare of consumers and to protect them against economic and accident hazards."

To that laudable end it puts out all sorts of helpful bulletins, warning against this dangerous product or that, instructing the housewife in the best use of her shopping dollar and reporting the latest crackdowns on misleading advertising.

As the department is exclusively concerned, however, with the sins of the private sector, nothing is said about the multiplication of hazards in the final two weeks of an election campaign. We are now in the season of "goodies," for each of which we shall have to pay. But the government as shopkeeper goes well beyond the erring shopkeeper who may offer a discount from a purely imaginary "regular" price. In some recent instances it has suppressed the price tags altogether.

No Price Tag

When the "byways and special places" program was announced some days ago, attention naturally centred on the imaginative proposal for a restricted speed, divided highway from Quebec City to Georgian Bay. A price tag was not mentioned since this, apparently, was to be a long-term project developed over perhaps 20 years.

The version offered in campaign literature is different. A 12-page document issued from party headquarters summarizes "the work the next Parliament must do for Canadians." Under the general heading: "Working Together for Personal Fulfilment," one reads: " A slow-speed scenic highway linking some of the parks is also planned." If this is indeed a "must" for the next Parliament, togetherness promises to be very expensive. Surely there is some estimate somewhere of the probable cost of personal fulfilment, government planned.

An unexpected sequel to the original announcement is the news of the waterfront park expropriation in Toronto. As Toronto can scarcely qualify as a byway, it is presumably regarded as a special place; the number of seats at stake in the general area being most impressive. Again the cost estimates leave much to be desired.

According to Mitchell Sharp, the cost of shoreline expropriation will probably be about $3 million. By the methods of accounting currently in vogue, this is a molecule. Research by The Globe and

. . . no byway

Mail suggests, however, that Mr. Sharp has not exhausted his subject.

Its report reads: "According to companies which have property in the area, total cost of the acquisition could run into hundreds of millions of dollars, depending on allowances made by the government for relocation."

A prospective purchaser, guided by the wisdom of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, would not stand for such a discrepancy in estimates if he was in the market, let us say, for a new car. But the political parties seem less and less disposed to cost their programs; they merely toss them out and expect consumers to be duly thankful for the solicitude they express and for the scope of their vision.

In other words governments, and would-be governments, appear increasingly less disposed to attempt what they are obviously not very good at doing. No firm that estimated like the government could long endure. When estimating occurs during an election campaign (if it occurs), factors enter into the accounting which make the price tags more than a little suspect.

Balance

There is always a requirement that one consideration be balanced against another. When the Government decided to build a giant international airport at Ste. Scholastique, it created a case of sorts for another giant international airport in the vicinity of Toronto. It has since developed that airports lack the universal appeal that may originally have been anticipated; with the result that Messrs. Trudeau, Stanfield and Lewis are all currently at odds with leading supporters in the Toronto region near Pickering.

The point is, nevertheless, that the price of one project (when we do have estimates) is bound to be misleading if there is a hidden cost in the form of compensatory projects. If hundreds of millions are now being committed to waterfront development in Toronto — which is doubtless a worthy project like dozens of others — will there have to be a subsequent accounting with Montreal which is seldom lacking in nation-stirring visions such as the plans of Mayor Drapeau for the Olympic Games?

Many reformers are persuaded that we ought to have shorter election campaigns. The case is compelling. The longer the campaign, the heavier the bill that is ultimately presented to us. We are a country of only 22 million. How, in our political circumstances, can we afford both Toronto and Montreal?

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of October 20, 1912:

Victoria's Rugby prospects brightened considerably on Saturday. There will be more than a two club fight between the Welshmen and Law Students, for the Wanderers have jumped into prominence, and now occupy second place as a result of their victory over the Victoria Welsh fifteen on Saturday. The victory for the Wanderers, while entirely unexpected by the local Rugby enthusiasts, changes the outlook greatly and with three first-class teams in the race for the title, the Barnard Cup competition has become an interesting contest.

In an Impersonal War, Bombing Is Just a Job

By JOSEPH B. TREASTER
New York Times

ANDERSEN AIR FORCE BASE, Guam — Six hours and 14 minutes after taking off from this Pacific island base, Capt. Terry Jennings' B-52 shuddered and 32,500 pounds of high-explosive bombs plummeted toward South Vietnam.

A few seconds later a ground controller radioed, "good job" — the bombs were right on target.

There was not a flicker of reaction from any of the six crewmen — no sign of satisfaction or any trace of excitement.

For the crewmen, sitting in their air-conditioned compartments more than five miles above the steamy jungle of South Vietnam the bomb run had been merely another familiar technical exercise. The crew knew virtually nothing about their target and they showed no curiosity.

Only the radar-navigator, who in earlier wars would have been called the bombardier, saw the bombs exploding, and those distant flashes gave no hint of the awesome eruption of flames and steel on the ground. No one in the plane, including this correspondent, heard the deafening blast.

In many ways, Jennings and his men are typical of the scores of crews that have been sent to Guam since February in a mammoth build-up that has brought the number of B-52s bombing Indochina to about 200 — four times more than were in the theatre at the close of last year. Some of the big bombers are based at Utapao, Thailand.

They are intelligent, steady family men doing a job they've been told to do. Maj. Orbert Marrs, the radio-navigator or bombardier, is 42 years old and has a family in Welch, W. Va. Capt. Mark Wiley, the co-pilot, of Concord, N.H., and the navigator, Capt. Jim Shima, from Cleveland, are both 26. Working in a bubble on the end of the aircraft is the tail-gunner, M. Sgt. Clyde (Ed) Edwin Going, from Shreveport, La.

Fusing bombs for Vietnam . . . 'we never get to see damage'

Because they are professionals, they take pride in doing their work well. But neither Jennings' crew nor any of the numerous other pilots and crewmen interviewed displayed the kind of enthusiasm for their assignment that bubbles through conversations with fighter pilots. "It's a job," the bomber men often say.

The huge, eight-engine planes that they fly are dropping more bombs in South Vietnam than any other kind of aircraft and they have been credited with having played a major role in blunting the North Vietnamese offensive.

On the ground a B-52 strike — or "Arclight," as they are commonly called — is a chillingly spectacular event, sometimes electric with excitement. Tremendous clouds of smoke and dust boil up and a thunder of kettle drums splits the ears. People in the "impact" area are killed or sent reeling in shock. Allied troops sometimes cheer or just sigh in amazement.

But none of this feeling reaches the B-52 crew. "We're so far away," said Capt. Gordon Crook, the 34-year-old electronic-warfare officer on Jennings' bomber. "It's an impersonal war for us."

The crewmen are highly skilled technicians trained primarily for missions with nuclear weapons. What they are doing in Vietnam demands precision, but only a fraction of their skill. The routine seldom varies and they say they are bored.

On most raids, clouds or darkness make it impossible for anyone in the plane to see South Vietnam. The people are always invisible. There is no anti-aircraft fire in South Vietnam that threatens the high-flying B-52s and so far none of the bombers have been reported lost to surface-to-air missiles or enemy fighter planes in the North.

The U.S. Military Assistance Command in Vietnam selects B-52 targets, takes responsibility of insuring that they are clear of civilians and decides how many planes are needed and what combination of bombs they should carry. So the big bombers, their crews and commanders on the ground here, are all part of a highly specialized delivery system.

Whether the war is right or wrong is not an issue with the crews, they say. They have been trained to operate the machinery of the B-52 and that is what they do. Where they put the bombs is someone else's decision and someone else's responsibility, they feel.

"As far as losing any sleep over what we're doing, how many people we kill . . . we never get to see the damage," said Crook, whose home is in Memphis ,Tenn.

At another point he said, "If we're killing anybody down there with our bombs I have to think we were bombing the enemy and not civilians. I feel quite sure about our targeting."

The missions themselves are exhausting. Jennings and his crew began studying their mission plans one day recently at 7:35 a.m. and dragged through their final debriefing nearly 17 hours later at 12:30 a.m. the next day.

They laugh when you ask if they volunteered to fly B-52s. No one seems to like the plane. It is an unmanoeuvrable monster and the last choice of flight-school graduates. B-52s are uncomfortable to ride in and some crewmen say they are afraid of serious mechanical or structural failure in the complicated and nearly 20-year-old planes.

Some of the men wonder if they're accomplishing anything. They've heard the praise from Saigon. But some still say: "It must not be too effective. We keep bombing the same targets."

India Seeking A New Strategy

By WALTER SCHWARZ
The London Observer

NEW DELHI — Two Indians out of five still live in "abject poverty" by the government's own standards. And the number below the poverty line — about 270 million — is as large today as it was 20 years ago.

These are the kind of statistics usually put out by an opposition, but here the government itself publicizes the bad news. It is part of a fashion in self-criticism which Mrs. Indira Gandhi's government has deliberately adopted.

The figures on the poverty line came out in a paper put out by the planning commission recently. They were repeated in Parliament by the planning minister. The "poor" were defined as people who consume less than 37 rupees ($4) worth of goods per head per month.

For a planning department that has been wrestling with poverty for two decades, these admissions are startlingly frank. The minister went on to admit: "Available projections suggest that if one has to rely on growth alone without directly tackling the problems of unemployment and income distribution, it may take another 30 or 50 years for the poorer sections of the people to reach the minimum consumption level."

Failure to reduce the numbers of the abysmally poor does not of course mean that India has been standing still all these years. It has built an impressive industrial base, makes its own jet planes, tanks, cars, locomotives, bicycles, watches, radios and almost everything else. After centuries of famines and decades of massive food imports, a science-based "green revolution" on the land has made it virtually self-sufficient in food.

The trouble is the population, which keeps relentlessly ahead of progress. Almost every village in India has its colorful family planning poster, showing a smiling mum and dad and two happy children under the slogan: "Two is enough." But birth control has still to make an impact on a population of 560 million that grows by 12,500,000 every year.

This tantalizing gap between progress and head-counting is neither new nor peculiar to India. What makes Mrs. Gandhi and her ministers shout it from the housetops is a new determination to do something about it.

But the obstacles are still as daunting as ever. Ironically, in the months since India's victory over Pakistan, people have become worse off instead of better. The war itself, the refugees from Bangladesh and a poor monsoon this year have combined to set off a wave of unprecedented inflation — which hits the poor more than anyone else.

Mrs. Gandhi has adopted a new fashion in development ecoromics which questions the value of relying on the growth of the national product ("growthmanship," she calls it) and stresses the importance of providing help where it is needed — among the urban poor and in the villages.

Food and jobs rather than growth in the GNP are now the slogans for the fifth five-year plan. Amid fierce controversy the strategy is being worked out. Objectives have already been formulated: a new dose of land redistribution to provide viable holdings for the small farmer; crash employment schemes in villages to help the landless; rationalization of grain distribution to cut out profiteers and case bottlenecks; harnessing of industry to produce more essential goods for the masses and fewer luxuries.

GANDHI
. . . losing to poverty

Each plan has its opponents — or at least skeptics who say that India's vast bureaucracy is too cumbersome and corrupt to allow grandiose reforms to make much impact. Perhaps the most damaging criticism of the new approach is that unless the cake gets larger, no amount of sharing it out afresh can be of much help. Helping the poor cannot be done without money, and money can only be generated by growth. Already a two-year halt in industrial growth has slowed down the whole economy.

So we are back to growth again — and Mrs. Gandhi is now torn between the conflicting advice of the free enterprisers on the right and the nationalizers on the left on how to make factories produce more. Should she curb the big business houses or allow them greater freedom?

"It doesn't matter as long as she decides on a course and sticks to it," said an economist, exasperated by the dithering. Judging by the number of conferences on economic policy she has been holding, it looks as if she is on the verge of a decision. If she can score as decisively against poverty as she did against Pakistan she will indeed have made history.

Doing Better in This Strong Land

By DOUGLAS FISHER

"The Land is Strong," says the stern voice of the announcer over the stark profile of Pierre Trudeau on the 60-second TV plugs of the Liberal party, which all viewers are seeing and hearing at an increasing tempo.

There's a touch of the Prudential Life commercial about those flicking magazine slices of a photogenic country and people, an attractive pastiche which concludes with the face and the slogan. Endurable like Prudential's Rock of Gibraltar; as inevitable as Volvo's theme line: "We build them the way we build them because we have to."

Then, having equal if not greater repetition on the channels we view, comes the Conservatives' "We Can Do Better." An Avis sort of attack. Crammed into their minute are slices of Canadiana. The emphasis is not on the landscape or belching stacks and busy docks and picnicking nature lovers, but on voices and people with beefs and concerns. Usually there's a brief glimpse of Bob Stanfield, but he's not the bedrock of it all as his chief rival is in the Liberal blurbs.

The red, white and blue lines run acrss the concluding graphic and then veer upwards. There's a subliminal suggestion of the country vaulting forward, statistics improving, if only the men who can "do better" get the chance.

Simplicity

These commercials of the major parties tend to run in parallel in our minds. At least they do in mine. Of course, this was what they were designed to do. One can see that an immense amount of scheming and editing went into them. The Liberals reduce the whole campaign to a simplicity. Can you conceive of any other Prime Minister so able to rule?

And the Tory message, like the Liberal one, sweeps away any consideration of third and fourth choices (NDP and Social Credit). There is an alternative to the arrogant ones who have mucked up the gut requirements of jobs and fair prices.

The Liberals rest upon their top asset, Mr. Trudeau. The Conservatives stress his failures as expressed in the vernacular of a variety of ordinary citizens and tell us to try the other choice, that it will be a marked improvement.

Rings Right

"The Land is Strong," not, "Canada is Strong" or "The Land is Stronger." To assert that Canada is strong would be more arguable, against that the land is strong. Similarly, if it was put that the land is stronger, the question comes: "Stronger than what?" Than it was pre-Trudeau? Than it would have been with anything other than a Liberal government?

It's a clever theme slogan because it is so true. It rings right to most of us. We know this, if we know anything: That in spaciousness and resources and variety we are among the world's fortunate. Then there's that smidgin hint in the theme of the key Liberal appeal since the Second Riel Rebellion: National Unity.

The Liberals are both the party which keeps Canada together and which has been in power so much of the time. Thus . . . identity with the primary need of confederation and the traditional party of meeting the need.

The Conservative slogan is just as simplistic as the Liberal. There's a promise, there's an undertaking in it. A line of argument we've all taken in from thousands of commercials and advertisements since we became old enough to watch and listen and read.

We have a basic choice. Implicit in the choice are the arguments that what was chosen before has not been very good. You've tried it again and again these past four years and it doesn't really get the wash as white as washes should be. We don't undertake more than that we'll be better. Let's not bother with details of why we'll do better. Not even a magic ingredient like Gardol or tax cuts or bigger pensions or a smaller civil service or a more democratic Parliament.

Clutter

Those are the details for speeches. They would only clutter up the core reasoning of the viewing missions, so many of whom, individually, know that things could be better for them than they are at present.

It seems to me that these complementary television commercials are more important in this campaign than their predecessors were in the campaigns of '65 and '68. Neither cadre of experts in the major parties could have anticipated that the campaign of '72 would be both fought and received with such massive disinterest. At least there seems to be disinterest, a discouragement, even a disillusionment with politicians.

Perhaps political enthusiasm and excitement can only be roused once every 10 years or so. Maybe it takes that long before disenchantment readies Canadians for another popular political savior.

All in all it's a discouraging sort of appreciation that with less than two weeks to go the complexities of Canada are reduced to "The Land is Strong" and "We Can Do Better."

Falling Flat on His Hypocrisy

By ALLAN FOTHERINGHAM

(From a column in The Sun. Fotheringham has been reporting from Quebec.)

One of the most rewarding aspects of the campaign has been to observe in Quebec that product of Tory expediency, Claude Wagner, fall flat on his hypocrisy.

Wagner, the Spiro Agnew law-'n-order champion of Quebec, returned in a sulk to the Bench once he lost his bid for the Quebec Liberal leadership. He has been one of four leadership losers from various parties recruited by a desperate Stanfield.

Wagner, according to the Detroit research firm that fuelled the Ontario Tory party win last year, was more popular in Quebec than one Pierre Trudeau. Wagner was going to lead Stanfield's Tories out of the Quebec wilderness (four seats). A speaking tour for the new Quebec heavyweight was mapped out clear across to Vancouver.

Wagner's first triumphant foray into the Eastern Townships south of Montreal, where Social Credit is especially strong, was disastrous. Workers in plants seemed intimidated by him.

"It's his clothes," was one complaint. "He looks like a judge." Wagner's aides went to work. When he next appeared, in the Gaspe, Wagner the Liberal - turned - Tory - judge-turned - politician - turned - judge suddenly sprouted tweed suits, turtle-neck sweaters and an exaggerated conversational style.

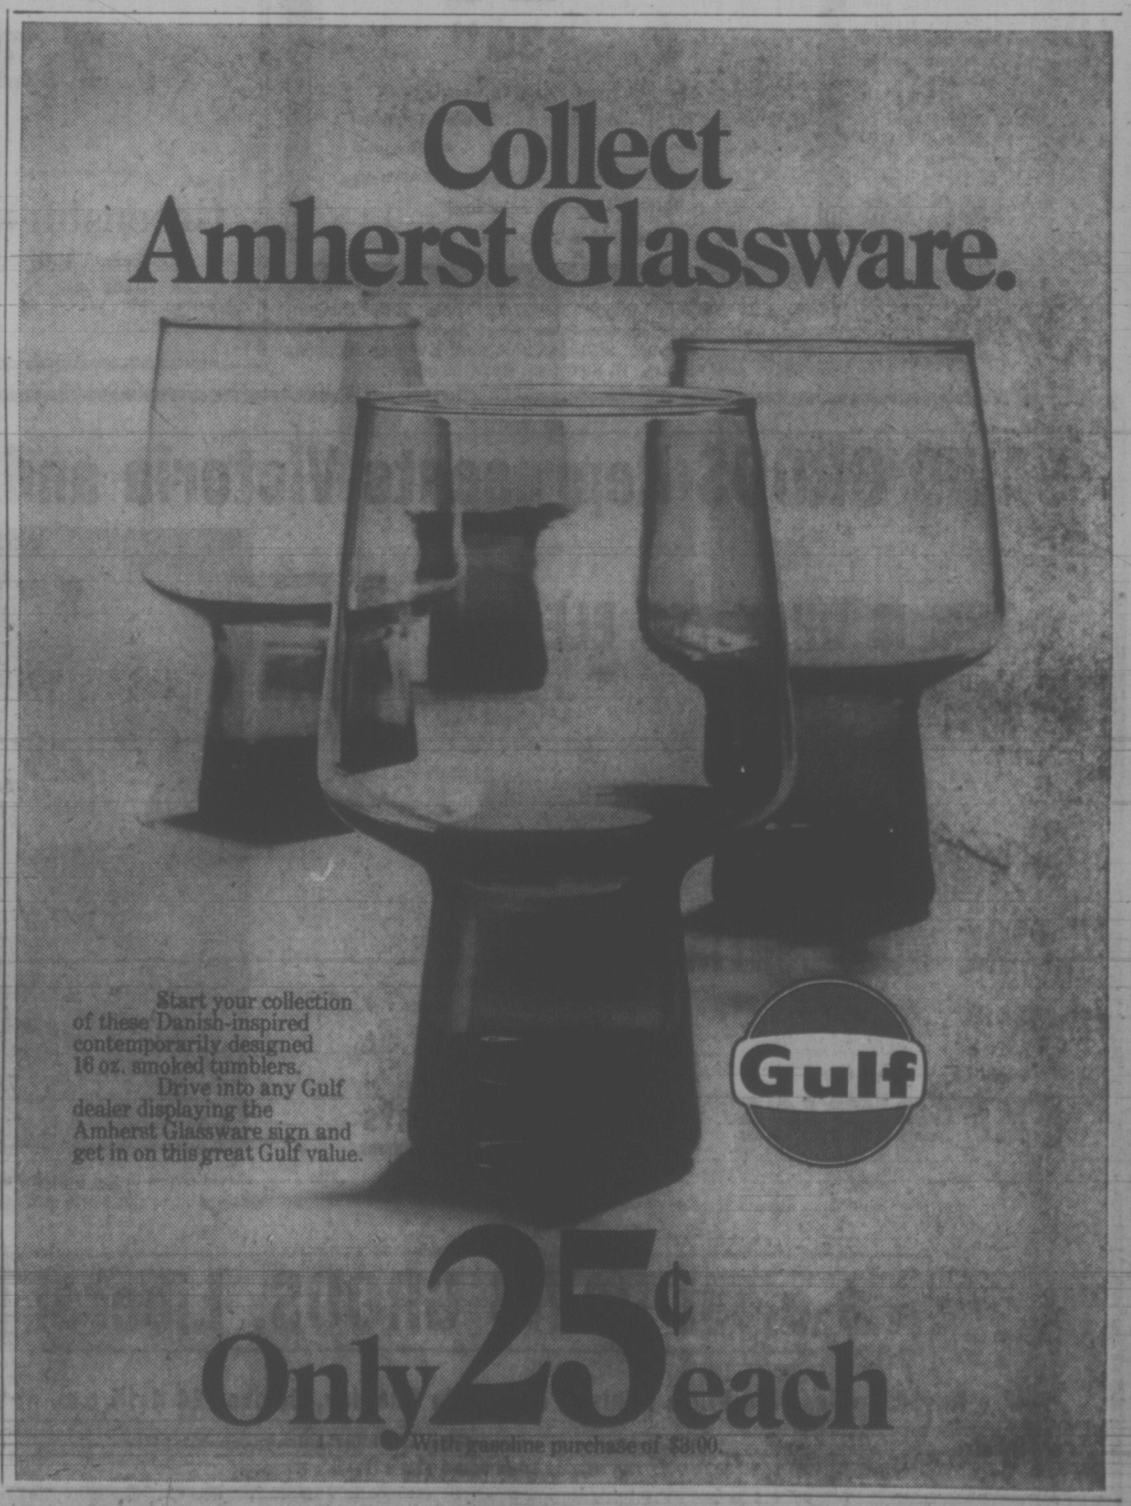
WAGNER
. . . bombs out

When he emphasized his concern for the common man, a rude newspaperman pointed out that he had spent 10 years of his law career representing large insurance companies.

Wagner was bombed. The rural Quebec suspicion of those who switch parties has done him in. Gone are the dreams of a triumphant national tour as Stanfield's lieutenant.

The main concern now is whether he can even win in his Ste. Hyacinthe seat, let alone do for Quebec what Marcel Faribault could not do in 1968.

Mr. Stanfield's dubious bending of principles to bring in this opportunist has not worked and does not reflect all too well on the Tories' claim to be offering a new integrity.



DEAD-OF-NIGHT LAWS ARE OUT

No longer will bleary-eyed MLAs conduct the province's business in the dead of night, at least during this special session of the legislature.

As a result of a motion passed Thursday, the house will not sit beyond 11 p.m. during the special session.

The original motion introduced by Premier Barrett called for two sessions to be held each day, one from 2 p.m. until 6 p.m. and the second from 8 p.m. "until adjournment."

The amendment suggested by Liberal Allan Williams (West Vancouver-Howe Sound) called for the phrase "until adjournment" to be changed to 11 p.m., in keeping with past NDP efforts to get the Social Credit government to adhere to an 11 p.m. curfew.

Barrett accepted the amendment and the motion was passed by the house without dissent.

The premier said the curfew was "evidence of a new era" in B.C. politics, a "rational way of doing business."

He added that he will be looking forward to "more peace and tranquility" as a result of the curfew.

Bruce Gets Back His Tin Hat

TORONTO — Bruce McDermott got his tin hat back Thursday, 30 years and two months after a German machine gunner blasted it from his head at Dieppe.

"I just came to get my hat back," he said quietly as The Royal Regiment of Canada paraded for him at Fort York Armory.

The helmet had been kept for 30 years by a nursing sister at the hospital where McDermott was treated as a prisoner of war.

She gave it to a group of Canadians who visited for the 30th anniversary ceremony in August and it was traced back to McDermott.

Thirteen other veterans of the Dieppe raid also showed up for the ceremony.

McDermott thought he recognized some, but he said: "They make me remember . . . I'd rather not."

Half his platoon was killed on the beach, the rest were wounded.

MUNICH — An Italian worker here did not trust banks so he sewed up his savings of $498 in his underpants, which he wore even when sleeping. Police said today that when the man woke up in the room which he shared with three fellow Italians, he discovered someone had cut up his underpants while he slept and stolen the money.

GREENWOOD, S.C. — The new-born son of 69-year-old Sen. Strom Thurmond will be named James Strom Thurmond, Jr. It was the second child for Thurmond and his wife, 26.

HOUSTON — Marcus Welby made a house call Thursday. His fee was $102,000. Welby, otherwise known as actor Robert Young, immediately endorsed the cheque to the American Cancer Society. The money had been collected in a society fund drive from local residents.

BELGRADE — The Queen returned here Thursday night from a visit to Dubrovnik and Titograd in southwestern Yugoslavia.

The Queen, accompanied by Prince Philip and Princess Anne, later boarded President Tito's private train on their way to the town of Djakovo where they will visit a stud farm today.

Pollen Views Undersea Garden Plan

Mayor Peter Pollen was shown Thursday how the remodelled Undersea Gardens will look, and a spokesman for the company said later the mayor liked the departure from the attraction's present "honky tonk" character.

After showing Pollen sketches and a model of the redesigned marine display, Bob Wright, major shareholder in the venture, said tenders will be called soon for the work which may take up to two months and cost "many thousands of dollars."

When completed the Gardens, in keeping with the city's over-all plan for rehabilitation of the Inner Harbor, will be moved a short distance to a new location just inside the finger wharf, near the Wax Museum.

Wright said the refurbishing scheme, designed by architect Allan Lester, involves fitting a new exterior shell with clean, uncluttered lines around the big steel tank which is the basis of the structure.

Colors will be charcoal grey and off-white, to blend in with the general tone of the harbor, and the structure will be topped with a flat roof garden.

Extensive refurbishing will be carried out inside, Wright said, adding: "We have some pretty exciting plans for the actual display features."

He said in the past council had expressed disapproval of the Undersea Gardens' exterior appearance, complete with clinging octopus, which gave it an atmosphere of "honky tonk" commercialism to the detriment of its educational marine life content.

"We wanted to prove we are good corporate citizens by making it blend in with the Inner Harbor, the new rather than the old," Wright said.

French Envoy in Hanoi Dies As Result of U.S. Bombing

Times News Service

Pierre Susini, France's delegate general to Hanoi died today as a result injuries received in an explosion caused by a bomb which the U.S. admitted today could have been theirs.

Susini was wounded when the French mission to Hanoi was destroyed in a raid, Oct. 11.

At first, the U.S. denied that they had caused the damage, blaming a misdirected North Vietnamese missile.

Pentagon spokesman Jerry Friedheim today said the bombing was probably caused by a mechanical malfunction in a bomb release system which caused the weapon to break free of a plane later than intended.

The bombing was accidental, he said.

The mission was hit during what Friedheim described as a "very major strike" on a rail yard three miles to the north of Hanoi.

President Nixon has sent a letter of regret to French President Pompidou over Susini's death.

Meanwhile, in saigon, President Nguyen Van Thieu told South Vietnamese legislators that Nixon rejected a North Vietnamese offer of a cease-fire before the Nov. 7 U.S. elections.

INVENTORY COST COLORS CHARGES

If you're ever wondering why it costs more to get a colored telephone than a black one, remember it's all a question of inventory.

That's the word from B.C. Tel spokesman Glyn Jones.

"We have nine colors of telephone besides the black one," Jones told The Times today. "That means if black phones only were available, we could take nine phones to nine installations."

"With a choice of colors we have to have 90 in stock. It's that inventory which makes the price difference."

Jones said colored phones cost $16 upon installation and black ones cost $10. Subsequent monthly rental charges are identical.

"Don't forget that the price of a colored phone has come down over the years. It used to be twice the price it is now," Jones said.

He said it was not a simple matter to change telephone rental rates because new rates had to be approved in Ottawa.

Jones said the extra price charged for an unlisted number — 50 cents per month — resulted from the extra trouble to directory assistance operators occasioned by people who have seen phones in houses but can't find the number in the book.

"That is time-consuming for an operator," he said. A private number to accompany a listed number but not itself listed is provided free of charge, Jones said.

Political Manners Rapped By Curtis

Freshman MLA Hugh Curtis (PC-Saanich and the Islands) thursday tore a long slice off previous members of the legislature for discourteous behavior in the house.

Curtis, making his maiden speech, referred to the low level of debate on numerous occasions in the past and said it has been a "source of acute embarrassment" to the people of the province.

The Tory member said it is up to the legislature to "lead by example" in its behavior and added that there is "no room for arrogance, bombast and discourtesy."

Curtis also spent some time criticizing the throne speech, calling it "a keen disappointment."

He said he is concerned that as a result of the contents of the speech, taxation may go up, and that government bureaucracy may become more developed, making it harder for ordinary citizens to get action on their individual requests.

Curtis also expressed concern that the government has not understood the financial position it is in and urged Barrett and his cabinet ministers to be "careful and cautious" in the path they set down for the province.

Sunken Ship To Be Blown

ST. IRENEE, Que. (CP) — The owners of a ship which sank here last winter have decided to blow the freighter up rather than spend the money required to refloat it.

The North Voyageur, owned by the Rail and Water Terminal Co., sank at the quay in this community with 1,000 tons of aluminum worth $1 million on board.

The owners said refloating would cost about $350,000. They said the ship's engines and electrical system have probably been too heavily damaged by the water to make refloating profitable.

After the remaining oil in the ship has been pumped out, the North Voyageur will be towed out to a depth of at least 52 feet and blown up.

Law Degree Ruled Out For Office

The registrar or deputy registrar of a land registry office in British Columbia will no longer have to be a barrister or solicitor under legislation given second reading in the legislature Thursday.

The amended Land Registry Act stipulates only that persons holding these positions must have had experience in a land registry office for at least 12 years.

Allan Williams (L—West Vancouver-Howe Sound) expressed his regret that the bill does not provide for increased salaries to land registrars whom, he said, perform a valuable function in the province and should be paid accordingly.

Two Killed At Courtenay

COURTENAY (CP) — Leonard Ray Hamilton, 19, and Patricia Elizabeth Davis, 17, both of Comox, died Thursday in a two-car collision at an intersection near here. Police said Jil Aitken of Courtenay, driver of the second car, was taken to hospital in Comox.

Capital Reluctant to Be Diverted

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

The Canadian Mining Association has issued a warning that policies attempting to divert capital from mining to secondary industry may result in capital going to some country where policies are more favorable.

All the western world is in competition for development capital and it will go to the area that offers the best terms, the association said.

The warning is in a booklet Tax Incentives, The Mining Industry and Canada's Economy. Printing date is October, 1972.

The eight-page booklet makes no mention of the New Democratic Party, but most of the material defends policies which have been attacked by NDP federal leader David Lewis.

A section on investment capital appears relevant to British Columbia where Premier Barrett has said his government's policy will be to penalize export of raw materials and encourage secondary processing within the province.

The mining association says the view that hampering the mining industry will result in increased investment in other sectors of the economy "is based on several misunderstandings."

There is not a fixed supply of capital available for investment in any province, the association says.

"Mining capital is essentially international. It will be attracted wherever mineral opportunities occur.

"If circumstances in Canada become such that it ceases to be attractive for capital to be invested in exploration and mining activities in this country, investors will move elsewhere."

In regards to tax concessions granted to mining firms, the association said these are warranted because it takes from four to six years from discovery of an ore body to first production.

Capital is tied up during that period. In addition, many millions are spent on exploration that fails to locate potential mine sites.

Skaist Mines Ltd., which is exploring a copper prospect on Vancouver Island, has moved onto the mining board from the interim list at the Vancouver Stock Exchange.

Brink Hudson and Lefever has underwritten 200,000 shares of the company at 55 cents. Skaist is looking for oil in Alberta as well as copper in B.C.

W. D. Latimer Co. Ltd. on behalf of a client has underwritten 300,000 shares of Royal Agassiz at 38 cents. Options were granted on 200,000 shares at 43 cents due March 15 and 200,000 shares at 48 cents due June 13.

West Coast Securities failed to exercise its option to purchase 120,000 shares of Silver Spring Mines at 75 cents and the agreement has been cancelled.

Canarim Investment Corp. has failed to exercise an option on 200,000 shares of Tyee Lake at 35 cents. The agreement is cancelled.

Col-Cel

Columbia Cellulose Co. Ltd. reports a loss of $8.6 million, on sales of $84.8 million, for the first nine months of 1972.

Comparable loss in 1971 was $12.8 million, on sales of $58.8 million.

Loss for the third quarter this year was reported as $1.2 million, on sales of $25.9 million, a considerable improvement over the comparable 1971 loss of $5 million on sales of $21 million.

Celanese

Celanese Canada Ltd. reports a loss, after extraordinary items, of $2,884,000 or 26 cents a share for the nine-month period ended Sept. 30.

This compares with a restated profit of $2,750,000 or 16.3 cents a share for the corresponding period last year.

Guaranty

Guaranty Trust Co. of Canada reports unaudited net profit for the nine months to Sept. 30 of $3,819,000 or 85.9 cents a share, up 30 per cent from $2,937,000 and 75.5 cents in the same period last year.

Third-quarter earnings of $1,154,000 were about the same as a year earlier.

Hawker Siddeley

Hawker Siddeley Canada Ltd. should improve on its 1971 results this year, the company's London-based parent group says in its interim report for 1972.

The Canadian company, of which Hawker Siddeley Group Ltd. owns 59 per cent, made an after-tax profit of about $1.25 million in 1971.

B.C. Firm Tries 3-Day Week

VANCOUVER (CP) — While the four-day work week is rapidly being adopted by British Columbia industries, a Vancouver company is spearheading a move to the three-day week.

A three-day, 36-hour week now is a permanent fixture in the service and parts department of Pacific GMC Ltd. and all but a handful of those affected agree with management that it is a good deal.

"We are getting more productivity and less faulty workmanship" says company president Neil S. McKechnie. "It put our costs up initially, but on the other hand in the overall picture we believe that may not be the case."

An evaluation of the new system, which has been in effect since July 1, will not be completed until the spring and McKechnie says a number of other companies are watching the experiment closely.

The 82 men involved are divided into two teams. The work day begins at 8 a.m. and ends at 9 p.m. with two half-hour breaks for meals.

Each team works three consecutive days, so that the company is open for business 13 hours a day for six days a week. The teams swap shifts every five weeks.

Under the old five-day week, the company employed 45 mechanics who worked the company's facilities to the maximum in two shifts. The 40-hour week prevailed in the non-union shop.

McKechnie says the new hours came about largely because of an increasing volume of business and the difficulty in having a mechanic finish a job — repairs on a truck for instance — in one shift. This meant tying up a repair bill over the next shift.

McKechnie said the alternative to changing the working hours would have entailed expanding the physical plant, which with equipment is valued at $500,000.

He said a four-day week was contemplated "but the timetable was just too damn complicated."

"The three-day week fitted in perfectly and gave us 20 per cent more capacity. Furthermore, all stalls are put to their maximum use."

He says the company received "marvellous co-operation's from the Unemployment Insurance Commission and the Workmen's Compensation Board in establishing the program. Because the program runs counter to the provincial Labor act, the Labor Relations Board ordered a vote among employees which showed 80 per cent were in favor.

Meantime, the provincial government's 15,000 office workers are waiting for the results of a report on a four-month trial of the four-day week conducted among 100 employees of the B.C. Medical Plan this summer.

The trial had the employees working from 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. with a half-hour lunch break for a total work week of 38 hours. They now have returned to their regular 8:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., five-day week with a 70-minute lunch break.

City, Museum Talk Money

Representatives of city council will meet soon with trustees of the Maritime Museum to try to resolve, once and for all, the thorny question of the museum's financing.

The proposal for the discussion arose out of a meeting Thursday of city council's finance committee, which was considering an application from the museum for property tax exemption on its Bastion Square building.

"If there is one thing that is not the responsibility of the city it is to support a Pacific Coast museum," Mayor Peter Pollen said.

Ald. Alf Hood told the committee that twice in recent months a critical shortage of funds almost caused the museum to close, and overtures had been made by both eastern Canadian and U.S. interests to purchase its collection.

Pollen said that statement came as a "thunderbolt" to him, and queried whether the sale option could be exercised when the museum had been receiving municipal support for so many years.

"If it closes down it should become the property of the provincial government," he declared.

The committee recommended the tax exemption be granted.

Meanwhile, Oak Bay council has sent a $1,000 grant-in-aid to the Maritime Museum of its own volition.

Curator Co. J. W. D. Symons said, "We got it without any asking on our part and I can assure you that a letter is going out from the board stating that we are extremely grateful."

Mayor Frances Elford said the intermunicipal committee had recommended that no grant be made because the community Council felt the museum should be supported by the provincial or federal governments.

"But we in Oak Bay believe that withholding money from the museum will not solve the problem," she said, "and that is why we made the grant."

The museum, Symons said, is in desperate financial trouble and is still awaiting Ottawa confirmation that it will receive a continuing $25,000 grant.

If the grant did not materialize the museum would seek once again to have the provincial government assume responsibility. Otherwise there would be no alternative but to close.

An application for a $7,000 grant was made to the intermunicipal committee last spring but Symons said he is still waiting for an answer.

Zoning Control Favored

Victoria Ald. Percy Frampton doesn't often see eye to eye with Mayor Peter Pollen, but he had to admit Thursday that a Pollen proposal for controlling development in James Bay has a lot of merit.

Pollen suggested earlier this week that the whole area be rezoned back to residential use, adding his doubts that council would have the courage to take such a radical step.

However, Frampton says he likes the idea, particularly as it offers a way to halt the unsightly spread of three-storey frame apartments.

However, Frampton said such blanket rezoning would not mean an end to bigger develpments in James Bay, as these could be proposed under section 702-A of the Municipal Act — which allows developers to bypass normal zoning requirements provided they comply with strictly-defined controls on the form of development.

"I have talked to some developers about this in the past two days, and if they had an idea they could go from R1 (residential zoning) to 702-A they would not be too much against it," he said.

"By doing this we would have complete control over what development takes place. We would be starting anew."

The drawback under the present system of apartment zoning, he noted, is that provided the broad requirements of that zoning category are met virtually any development can proceed, regardless of esthetics, the importance of the site in relation to the surrounding area or other considerations.

The loopholes available under this policy allowed a building permit to be issued recently for a proposed three-storey frame apartment at Dock Street and Dallas Road, which has created some concern at city hall.

Planning committee discussion of the matter Tuesday resulted in a recommendation that council establish a land acquisition fund to buy up land threatened by such undesirable development.

Indians Make Trade

Lindholm: Candid About Label

and Lindholm ran unsuccessfully as a Liberal candidate in the 1969 provincial election.

But calculation is part of every political aspirant's equipment: Lindholm professes a social conscience too — perhaps it is because he can remember when his office did not have wall-to-wall broadloom and the thick muted patina of success.

"When I came to this town, I had the ass out of my pants. The Bank of Montreal wouldn't lend me $300 for my first down payment on a house."

"They've lent me a lot of money since," he added with a wry grin.

At 47 Lindholm is laughing and could relax at the helm of his 37-foot sloop Moonraker and let the world breeze by.

That is not his style, however.

"I address myself to sailing the way I address myself to almost anything. I'd never held a tiller in my hand before I bought my previous boat; a lot of the local boys can tell you some funny stories about Louie hanging off a reef!"

It's four sheets to the wind in politics too.

"I'm also a kind of a guy who likes to be a doer. I want to be where the effective control is and have a part of it. I will not be a backbencher for very long, and if I am, I won't seek re-election. . . ."

The cliche "establishment" might be applied and Lindholm is candid about such a label.

"You take Dick Wilson, and you take Hugh Stephn (former Victoria mayors) . . . there's no question about it, their candidacy had the approval of the overwhelming number of important business figures in this community.

". . . it happens because of social defaults. Nobody else musters a candidate. The reason I'm running is A, I want to, and B, because I got a lot of encouragement from, yes, some of these elitists we talk about who happen to know Louie better than they know Joe Blocs who is pulling off the greechain, which I also once did.

The days when Lindholm was a greenchain man are long gone but "establishment" is too simple a label.

"I suppose like everybody else I'm a complicated human being. I consider myself a reformer; I consider myself a socialist in many ways."

When it comes to policy though, Lindholm shows true Grit.

He does not believe in buying back the country a la Walter Gordon and Mel Hurtig. Instead, Lindholm echoes Prime Minister Trudeau: "We have to harness the resources of this country to purchase our future, not our past.

Nor is he against American capital developing our resources.

"To me the important thing is control. All of the abuses of which we speak of foreign corporations do not arise as a consequence of ownership. They arise because of our lack of guts and foresight in controlling what they do here."

Resources and control are the touchstones of Lindholm's economic nationalism.

The increasing American appetite for our land is not important in the Liberal candidate's view. He believes it can always be expropriated, if that is the wish of Canadians.

In his capacity as a lawyer he has aided Germans, Swiss and Americans in acquiring Canadian land and makes no apologies about it.

". . . I have found them to be pretty good land citizens. The blocs of land they have bought are still here. They are not all divided up into three lots to the cussed acre with houses cheek by jowl . . . as Canadians would do."

Lindholm would also be in favor of legislation requiring pension and mutual funds to invest a large amount of their monies in Canadian stocks.

"If we want to buy back our country, let's do it with our own money."

Nor does he see any problem in subsidizing industry with "our money".

It ". . . is preferable to unemployment, unemployment insurance and welfare," Lindholm says.

On unemployment he claims the Liberals have the best track record in finding and expanding jobs. The lower birth rate of the past decade, according to Lindholm, will soon show itself as lower unemployment statistics.

Drugs and the death penalty put Lindholm a little to the left and right respectively of the party line.

By giving heroin addicts their drug legally — as is done in Britain — he believes the problem can be controlled.

"I'm all for the Bail Reform Act. I don't get uptight about marijuana, except for those who are pushing it; not that I'm in favor of legalization."

Capital punishment is another story. As a lawyer who has defended accused murderers Lindholm's instincts are for clemency, but as a man who respects the law he practises he thinks the federal cabinet is wrong in commuting death sentences for those convicted of killing policemen and prison guards.

"They (the cabinet) are using the power they have for clemency to change the law which Parliament should really be doing."

Despite a few qualifed answers and party lines Louis Lindholm sometimes displays candor as refreshing as a wisp of wind on a dead sea.

"There is an increasing realization on the part of the voter that maybe the local guy doesn't count for so much anyway — I don't like that from my point of view. But let's face it: Today democracy has disintegrated into four-year dictatorships."

BI-BI PROGRAM FLOP: GRIT CANDIDATE

Louis Lindholm, federal Liberal candidate for Esquimalt-Saanich, told a Langford audience of 50 Thursday night that he agreed the Liberal government's bilingualism program had been a failure.

"When 27 per cent of Canadians speak French as their first language and only 18 per cent of the civil service is bilingual — I agree the program is a flop," he said.

"If you deny the right of French-speaking people in this country to get a letter back from the government in their own tongue then how can we say this is a country for all Canadians," Lindholm said.

Questioned on the position of Quebec within the federation, he said his was the only party that had "taken a stand across the country."

Progressive Conservative candidate Donald Munro said he deplored the idea of "forcing a second language on a mature man."

"Let him learn it as a child," he said.

Munro, a long-time diplomat, said that whenever he had worked with French-speakers it had been "in conditions where we worked with two languages."

John Tisdalle, Social Credit candidate, said the Liberal government was telling Quebecers they had all the influence in Ottawa.

"What kind of intimidation is that?" he said.

Roger Smith, New Democrat, said the socialist vote in Quebec had previously gone to the separatist movement.

"But in this campaign we have taken a very definite federal position," he said, "and I think we are getting a great deal of support."

"People there have seen that Trudeau has used Quebec as a political base.

"I admit we don't appear to have membership in Quebec," Smith said.

Questioned on capital punishment for murderers (which is due to be reconsidered soon in Parliament), both Lindholm and Smith said they could not take responsibility for putting people to death. They both pointed out that juries could convict an innocent man and there would be no recompense if he were put to death.

Munro said he favored a return to capital punishment for murderers.

Lindholm said capital punishment should be retained as a deterrent for murderers convicted of killing a policeman in pursuit of his duties of a prison guard.

Mediators' Demands 'Travesty'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Senator Ed Lawson said Thursday it would be a "travesty" for the provincial government to pay in full the three members of the B.C. Mediation Commission whose services are no longer required. He estimated it would cost taxpayers about $400,000 for the "past incompetence" of the members of the commission which the NDP government is disbanding.

The Teamster union executive said it now appears that chairman John Parker and commissioners Pen Baskin and Allistair Pollock did not have contracts. "It appears they were working at the pleasure of the Legislature which means Legislature could give them less than they might have been originally offered or expected to receive."

Lawson said he wasn't aware of the terms of the order-in-council under which the former Social Credit government appointed them in 1968 for seven years. But he would not give them more than a month's notice and severance pay if severance is provided in the order.

GUELPH, Ont. — Many Canadian farmers are forgetting basic animal husbandry techniques and relying too much on drugs to fatten stock and keep it healthy, a leading Canadian veterinary teacher said Thursday.

Dr. D. A. Barnum of the agricultural college here said that clean quarters and good feeding habits are being ignored by many farmers who prefer lifting the phone and calling the vet to mucking out the barn.

The main problem with this, he said, is that many animals are developing resistance to antiboitics and this is harmful not only to the stock but also to people who eat the carcasses of the animals.

Building Costs Above Average

HARRISON HOT SPRINGS, B.C. (CP) — Barry Law, informaticon director of the Amalgamated Construction Association, said this week Vancouver construction costs have increased 68.9 per cent since 1961 and now are 3½ per cent higher than the national average.

Law said a cost analysis by a U.S. construction statistitics organization showed that Canadian costs were nearly 13 per cent below the U.S. average.

Canadian construction costs increased 8.1 per cent during the past year due to a 4.3 per cent increase in wages and a 3.7 per cent increase in the cost of materials.

Law said Vancouver's construction costs are 6.5 per cent lower than Toronto's. But Vancouver's costs are 1.1 per cent higher than Ottawa's, five per cent more than Winnipeg's, 4.4 per cent more than Calgary's, 7.7 per cent higher than Edmonton's and 11.8 per cent higher than Montreal's costs.

The First Canadian Bank
Bank of Montreal
We're looking for future Managers. Now.
If you're interested in training for a management position with one of Canada's leading banks, then we're interested in you.
OPPORTUNITY
Bank of Montreal wants high potential individuals to enter a development program leading directly to a position as a branch Administration Manager. This is an important position in our Branch banking system. The Administration Manager is responsible for the proper functioning of the support systems necessary for the efficient operation of the Branch. As part of the Branch Management Team, the Administration Manager is involved in ensuring that a high quality of customer service is maintained, the administration of personnel; the operation of the accounting, information and reporting systems; and the supervision of premises.
REQUIREMENTS
We offer different lengths of development programs ranging from 12 to 30 months, depending upon the individual's qualifications. The people we need must have good characters. They will be individuals who relate well to people, are mature self-starters and are capable of exercising sound judgment. If you're a high-school graduate with some related work experience (office, retail sales, finance, for example), we'll be glad to go into the subject in more detail.

MEMO to the Wonderful Women Who Work

Watch for EATON'S Week of Events Oct. 23rd to 28th for Victoria's Career Women

CONCERNED? WONDERING?
HOW, REALLY, DO THE PROGRESSIVE CONSERVATIVES DIFFER FROM THE OTHER PARTIES?
THE PROGRESSIVE CONSERVATIVE PARTY:
- believes STRONGLY in the incentive system.
- believes STRONGLY that a person who works and is thrifty should be able to enjoy the fruits of his labour.
- believes STRONGLY in capable management in government motivated with a social conscience.
- is in no way a socialist or socialistic party.
- believes STRONGLY that Parliament must be supreme in Canadian affairs.

There is clear proof, past and present, that the other parties ARE DIFFERENT from the above.
CONSIDER THESE POINTS BEFORE YOU VOTE. THERE IS A DIFFERENCE. AND THEN:

SPARKY IGNITES FURY IN TENACE

OAKLAND (AP)—"All three had Sparky's name on them," said usually mild-mannered Gene Tenace, displaying the meaning of his given first name — Fury.

Tenace, the Oakland Athletics' catcher whose home run and single helped the Athletics take a 3-1 lead over Cincinnati Reds in the 1972 World Series, ripped manager Sparky Anderson and his National League champion Reds.

"I don't feel that that club over there has any respect for us," said Tenace, whose "all three" referred to the trio of home runs he has hit so far in the series.

Tenace lambasted the Reds for remarks printed in newspapers knocking the American League champion Athletics.

After Tenace's two homers won the first game of the series in Cincinnati, Anderson was quoted as saying: "That kid hasn't done much before."

"That really upset me," said Tenace. "I know I hit only five home runs during the season, but that's not an indication of how I hit.

"I played against Sparky in the minors and hit pretty good. He upset me talking that way."

Tenace was just getting warmed up on Anderson. He then turned his attention to Cincinnati catcher Johnny Bench.

"How about Bench saying that if anybody should hit two home runs it should be him? For crying out loud, give another guy credit."

Tenace not only hit a home run in Thursday night's fourth game, but his single in the ninth placed the tying run in scoring position and he eventually scored the run in the 3-2 triumph.

"It's been a disappointing season and this World Series is making up for it," said Tenace, who didn't become the regular Oakland catcher until the final two months of the season.

Angel's Single Caps Pinch-Hitting Heroics

Pinch-hitter Angel Mangual got the pitch he wanted and his single to right field scored the winning run for the Athletics Thursday night.

The dramatic base hit through a drawn-in infield capped a two-run rally in the last of the ninth inning as Oakland beat Cincinnati Reds 3-2 and took a solid 3-1 lead in the 1972 World Series.

"I prayed that the ball would go through," said Mangual after driving in Gene Tenace from third base with the winning run.

Three pinch-hitters came through for Williams in that emotion-charged ninth after Oakland appeared to be finished.

Pedro Borbon, who had pitched in the eighth in relief of Cincinnati starter Don Gullett, was sitting on a 2-1 lead when the Athletic's came up in the last inning. The Reds' righthander got the first out of the inning, a harmless grounder by Mike Hegan.

When Borbon went to a 2-1 count on Tenace, Cincinnati manager Sparky Anderson thought it was time for his best reliever, Clay Carroll.

Carroll threw one of his sinker balls to Tenace and the Oakland catcher hit it through the infield to left, just beyond the reach of shortstop Dave Concepcion for a single that sent pinch-runner Allan Lewis to second.

"He threw a good sinker to Tenace," said Anderson. "It was just a routine ground ball that got through."

Oakland fans, meanwhile, saw the possibilities of a comeback and began to rock the park with cheers.

MINCHER RESPONDS

Williams next called on Don Mincher to pinch-hit, telling the veteran first baseman: "Go up swinging." Mincher brought the crowd to its feet with a single to right field that scored Lewis with the tying run.

Oakland pennants sprouted in the stands and wriggled furiously as the noise from the crowd became ear-splitting.

The stage was set for Mangual with runners on first and third and one out. He jumped on Carroll's first offering—a "fastball right over the plate"—and hit it to the right side of the infield. Second baseman Joe Morgan stretched for it, but it was a couple of feet beyond his reach.

Tenace came in with the winning run to the wild cheers and an exploding scoreboard in center field. Fireworks went off as the Oakland catcher jumped on home plate and headed for a knot of happy team-mates running from the dugout.

3RD SERIES HOMER

"The man upstairs has been good to me in this Series," said Tenace, who also hit a home run in the fifth inning to break a 20-inning Oakland scoring drought.

Tenace's third home run of the Series gave the Athletic's a 1-0 lead off Cincinnati's Don Gullett. That small margin lasted until the Reds rallied for two runs in the eighth inning.

Concepcion singled off Oakland starter Ken Holtzman and went to second on Julian Javier's sacrifice. A bouncer by Pete Rose moved Concepcion to third and at this juncture, Williams brought in Vida Blue to pitch to Morgan.

Morgan walked on a 3-2 count, then Bobby Tolan ripped a line-drive double into the right field corner to give the National League champions a 2-1 lead over the American League title-winners.

That hit kept the hometown crowd subdued until the wild, ninth-inning finish. Rollie Fingers finished up and got his first World Series victory, providing the Athletic's with the type of airtight pitching that has muffled Cincinnati's tough hitters.

"I'd have to say," said Anderson, "that the A's have as good a pitching staff as any team I've seen."

Cincinnati	000 000 020—	2	7 1
Oakland	000 010 002—	3	10 1

Gullet, Borbon (8), Carroll 0-1 (9) and Bench; Holtzman, Blue (8), Fingers 1-0 (9) and Tenace. Home run: Oakland—Tenace (3rd).

About Racism, Reay, And Soccer's Sad State

A busy week on the hustings, or if MLA Emery Barnes was right, what, pray, does that make Arthur Ashe?

Barnes, a former football player with the B.C. Lions, snubbed the Rothman's International tennis tournament Sunday when he refused to participate at the opening ceremonies because two of the players were from South Africa. Selected by Premier Barrett, obviously because of his sporting background, Barnes pulled a no-show because he didn't agree with South Africa's apartheid policies. He explained he "acted as an individual," when in fact he was representing the province. The two South Africans, Rob Maud and Cliff Drysdale, in contrast, were representing themselves as professional tennis players, and not the South African government. That's to keep the record straight.

No, Emery, your peculiar form of racism — that's what it was — is not appreciated here, and not to be condoned by the premier, either. This was player against player, not "nation against nation."

You missed your assignment, which you didn't often do in football. And you can do better. After all, you came here, for what you were, a football player, and stayed on to be elected an MLA. You were accepted for what you were. For which you are to be congratulated. But an MLA for all of us, not just yourself, please.

Still, you've got distinguished company in the doghouse. That former fullback fellow, Dave Barrett, fumbled the ball when he got it back from you, too.

But then, some fullbacks are like that. As an ex-lineman, you should know. This time, however, you both have your nationalism all mixed up. So, if you're allowed one gaffe, that's it. Dave, he's in deeper, and can't always say what he's really thinking, and still keep everyone happy.

And, oh yes! Arthur Ashe. He's a black man, like you, and a pro, like you, and he was even barred from competing in South Africa. Yet, he plays against Maud, and Drysdale, and others, every week, like a pro. Because these are his fellow athletes, and fit under one of those many confusing sub-headings of racism — equal opportunity for all. In this case, tennis Not politics. Let's keep the distinction clear.

Then, in hockey, an old friend was speaking from Vancouver. And what Billy Reay of the Chicago Black Hawks was saying was that if any hockey fan is looking for a surprise this year, tab Pittsburgh Penguins as the team to watch. "They're a good, young team," he said. "We beat them four straight in the playoffs last year, but three of the games could have gone either way." Reay, too, said of ex-Edmonton Oil Kings, Phil Russell and Brian Ogilvie: "These are two exceptional drafts. Russell, in particular, is a coming star."

Of his Black Hawks, he admitted: "You just have to miss a fellow like Bobby Hull . . . maybe we have been winning (that was before Vancouver 6-3) but we haven't been playing well . . . we have size . . . we need speed . . . and it looks like a tight race in the West."

Then there was the continuing and confusing story on football — the B.C. Soccer Commission versus the Premier Soccer League, and may the best organization win. Right now, that is the B.C. Soccer Commission. They've suspended almost everybody in the PSL except the players, who will get theirs if they play another game. So, I asked Island commission member Wilf Sadler about the problem.

What Wilf said in effect was that it was a can of worms, of which he had enough, thank you, and to open it up again, wouldn't do anybody, or soccer, any good. But he did explain that the PSL had not, repeat not, kept the faith, or paid their bills. Those were the cardinal sins. Besides, many of the players on PSL teams were not signed, and how can the B.C. Soccer Commission enforce a rule whereby the PSL clubs were required to pay $100 a player to Pacific Coast Soccer League clubs for a transfer fee, which had been agreed to by all parties, when some players weren't even signed?

Meanwhile, Sadler is off to Mexico for a holiday; the Regals may, or may not play; anyone who plays for them is out; and "yes, I really do think there is a place for summer soccer in B.C.," said Sadler. "But not under this year's rules."

And how sad it all is. For soccer.

Now Turk Broda has passed away. The fabled fat man of Maple Leaf hockey, three times an all-star, junior coach, et al . . . He will be remembered, as should Jack Smith, who did so much for curling here, and Jim Pickford, the ex-lacrosse star . . . and a note from San Diego: "Murray Kennett (the ex-Cougar) has been a pleasant surprise, says coach Jack Evans . . . and what's this? The Hockey News is in, and the usual preseason prediction polls.

In the East: New York, Boston, Montreal, Detroit, Toronto, Buffalo, Vancouver, N.Y. Islanders. In the West, Chicago, Minnesota, St. Louis, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Los Angeles, California, Atlanta. But speaking of polls, I like John Diefenbaker's spirit best. They're only for dogs, he says . . . Meanwhile, Don Jensen would like it recorded that he won his first mixed curling game this week . . . the B.C. Lions that Jim Young set two club records and is eyeing another in the final three games. Young, with three TD grabs last week, now has 10, a new high, and his 190 yards gained boosted this total to 1,142 yards. If he can latch on to just seven more passes in the Lions' final games, he'll pass Paul Cameron for total receptions. Cameron had 58. Young the All-Canadian? You bet.

Taking advantage of "blocking" by clubmate, flanker Ian Kirkpatrick, captain of rugby's famed All-Blacks, romps for try against British Columbia representative side Thursday in Vancouver. New Zealand national team opened extensive tour with 31-3 triumph over Reps.

All Blacks Overpower Reps with Late Surge

VANCOUVER — New Zealand All Blacks, sporting superior weight and conditioning, exploded in the second half Thursday to defeat B.C. Reps 31-3 at Brockton Oval.

All Blacks won the last two encounters in Vancouver 33-3 and 38-3.

Rob Hindson of Victoria booted a 35-yard penalty goal in the first half and the provincial side was only trailing 11-3 at the intermission.

But in the second half, New Zealand's bigger and heavier forwards and better drilling spelled the difference.

Overall, the Kiwi forwards snatched up at least 80 per cent of the ball from the set scrums and lineouts while, particularly in the second half, the faster backs raced through almost at will to score.

All Black captain Ian Kirkpatrick, one of the fleet wing forwards who gave B.C. backs little litutude, scored two trys.

Bob Burgess, a brilliant standoff half who executed several spectacular breaks, also scored two trys for the visitors.

Centres Grant Batty and Bruce Robertson scored trys late in the match while fullback Joe Karam converted the final two trys and booted a penalty goal in the first half.

B.C., although outplayed and outweighed, presented a creditable performance. Garth Hendrickson of Vancouver was particularly effective, matching the Kiwis with some excellent moves in his wing forward slot.

The provincial side was captained by Bruce Howe of Victoria, who with two other backs from the capital city — Alan Rees and Stu Barber — turned in good games.

Dave Docherty, Ken Wilke and Gaither Zinkin completed the seven-man Victoria contingent on the B.C. Reps.

In preliminary matches, St. George's of Vancouver downed Brentwood College 31-7 and Mount Newton Junior High School held Balmoral, last season's Vancouver champions, to a 4-4 tie.

RUGBY MATCH

Victoria Ebb Tide and Vancouver Oldstylers, both winners over the touring Wak Wak Club of Japan earlier this month, meet in an exhibition rugby match for over-40 players Saturday at 2 p.m. in Macdonald Park.

Sabres Serve Warning Note With 6-0 Win

BUFFALO, N.Y. (CP) — One thing standing in the way of Buffalo Sabres and a playoff berth in the National Hockey League the last two seasons has been a porous defence.

Last year they had big Gil Perreault and Rick Martin racking up goals and points, and little Rover Crozier performing superbly under less than ideal conditions.

New coach Joe Crozier prescribed the right formula this year, stressing defence by acquiring — through general manager Punch Imlach's manipulations — veteran Tim Horton and Jim Schoenfeld, six foot two and 200 pounds, in the junior draft.

To add a little versatility up front, Rene Robert, a two-way performer, has been a regular with Perrault and Martin and the Sabres have emerged as a serious playoff threat in only their third year.

Thursday night they climbed to the top of the East Division for the first time, thumping Vancouver Canucks 6-0 in the only scheduled game to stretch their unbeaten string to five games — four wins and a tie.

Perreault, Martin and Robert picked up 10 scoring points against Vancouver. Perreault scored after only 34 seconds of play, unassisted, then added three assists. He moved into the NHL scoring lead with 12 points.

Martin, last year's record-setting rookie with 44 goals and 74 points, had two goals and Robert had a goal and three assists.

Nationals Able to Score, But So Can WHA Rivals

By Canadian Press

Doug Michel's Ottawa Nationals could never be accused of not being able to score. The trouble is, in their first three World Hockey Association games, the opposition proved even more prolific.

The Nats finally put it together for coach Billy Harris Thursday night and thrashed visiting Chicago Cougars 6-2 in a relatively tame inter-division game.

It was the first win of the season for Ottawa against three earlier setbacks. They've scored 21 goals, co-leaders in the WHA department with New York Raiders.

Their average of 5.2 goals a game, however, was offset by a horrendous defensive mark in which they have allowed a league-leading 24 goals.

Elsewhere Thursday, Cleveland Crusaders stretched their win string to five with a 3-1 win over the Raiders, Houston Aeros dumped Minnesota Fighting Saints 5-1, Quebec Les Nordiques nudged New England Whalers 4-3 and Los Angeles Sharks handed Philadelphia Blazers their third straight loss, 4-2.

REGALS HOPE TO AVOID SUSPENSION OF PLAYERS

Jack Adams, president of Victoria Regals and a director of the Premier Soccer League, said this morning that there was no way his organization wanted "to put any players in danger of suspension."

"We'd rather respect the suspension, not play this weekend and continue negotiations with the B.C. Soccer Commission in hopes of making the playoffs next weekend," Adams said.

The commission slapped the league with a massive amount of fines and suspensions earlier this week for going ahead with the schedule despite an earlier suspension handed down Oct. 6 for failure to pay a $100 transfer fee for each player signed from amateur teams.

These fees go to the amateur team involved.

Officials of the PSL met early Thursday morning in Vancouver and announced they had wired the Canadian Soccer Association appealing the severity of the penalties.

"I hope we'll hear something today," added Adams.

He said the league didn't want to go ahead and "buck the commission," preferring instead to work within the framework of the governing bodies.

Regals and league-champion Vancouver Columbus are scheduled to play Saturday at Royal Athletic Park.

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — Ron Letellier and Jim O'Hern led the way through the first round of the $100,000 Professional Golfers Association Club golf championship Thursday with five-under-par 65s.

They played the Pinehurst Country Club's No. 1 course, a 6129-yard, par-70 layout, carding identical 33-32 rounds.

Letellier, from the North Hills Country Club at Manasset, N.Y., posted six birdies and a single bogey. O'Hern, pro at the Harmony Landing Club at Goshen, Ky., dropped five birdies with two coming on approach shots within a foot of the flag.

Joe Cardenas of Lancaster, Ohio, was third with 67 and five players were tied at 68.

Winter Spring Catches Bolster Salmon Picture

If there's anything the wife has been nagging you to do recently — do it!

There's a lot to be desired on the fishing scene around Vancouver Island.

However, as always, some exceptions exist. Winter springs have been turning up around the southern end of the Island to bolster declining catches of coho and larger springs.

Minnows have been the favorite bait in Finlayson Arm, where fishermen are taking winter springs up to 11 pounds in Misery Bay and in the vicinity of Goldstream Island.

A few coho up to 13 pounds and winter springs around the nine-pound mark between Indian and Cole bays constitute the main return in the middle part of Saanich Inlet.

Morning and evening fishermen off Oak Bay are picking up winter springs the odd big one up to 22 pounds and a few coho as heavy as 15 pounds around Fiddle Reef, the Chain Islets and the golf course shore. Favored gear has been strip, small spoons and either polar bear or pearl pink buzz-bombs.

The same type of catch is coming in from Pedder Bay in the vicinity of Fossil Point and the kelp bed.

Coho up to 17 pounds and winter springs up to 15 are striking in Becher Bay. The coho may be found around Church or Frazer islands while springs have been caught primarily off the log boom area.

Secretary Island waters are still supporting coho and the odd spring. Most, if not all, have been caught on 50 to 70 feet of line, 12 ounces of weight and minnows.

An abundance of chums are jumping in Cowichan Bay and a few coho are still being taken by buzz-bombers.

Farther north, however, a few coho are coming in on buzz bombs off Saratoga Beach, Bates Beach and Black Creek.

Some "feeder" springs are also producing a smidgen of action off Deep Bay.

Near Campbell River, springs up to 25 pounds have been landed near the river mouth and a few coho are showing near Race Point and Menzies Bay.

Shawnigan, Prospect, Dougan's, First, Second, Brannan, Lower Campbell, Upper Campbell and Buttle lakes are rated as NIBBLES: Eric Grant captured first prize in the Central Saanich Lions Club salmon derby Sunday with a 12-pound, two-ounce coho . . . Barbara Dettwiller, who landed a 7:07-pound coho, captured the women's trophy and Godfrey Westmoreland netted a 4:02-pound coho to win the junior trophy . . . All three fish were caught in Saanich Inlet, although the derby also took in Sidney waters . . . Robert D. Adrian won the draw prize of a trip for two to Harrison Hot Springs — but took $100 instead.

Indian Bay produced the top two salmon in the monthly Chinook Club Frostbite Derby on Sunday . . . J. Murray won with a 10:03-pound coho and Wayne Midlane was second with a 7:00-pound coho.

BOWLER OF WEEK

Solid 902 series helped Donna Bridgen of Duncan to Bowler-of-the-Week honors in annual competition sponsored by The Times. Donna rolled single games of 310, 292 and 300 to top women's fivepin division in Ladies' Fivepin League at Duncan.

Wheaties Warm Up New Home

Brandon Wheat Kings were told to make themselves at home in their new arena — and that's what they're doing.

The Wheat Kings routed Swift Current Broncos 9-1 before 1,673 fans at home Thursday night to chase Swift Current out of first place in the Eastern Division of the Western Canada Hockey League.

Talented Ron Chipperfield sparked Brandon with four goals, the second time this season he has notched four in a game at home. He now has 12 goals in five games, easily the best in the league.

The new Brandon arena was opened last week.

In the other games, Edmonton Oil Kings ended a three-game losing streak by downing New Westminster Bruins 4-3 and Medicine Hat Tigers maintained sole possession of first place in the Western Division with a 4-2 triumph over Vancouver Nats.

It was the second game in succession in which Swift Current has surrendered nine goals, following a 9-5 whipping by Winnipeg Jets Wednesday. Henry Durkin, brilliant early in the season, started in goal for Swift Current and left in the third period when Loren Mollekon took over.

Chipperfield's rookie linemate, Rick Blight, scored one goal and five assists — including helpers on all of Chipperfield's — for a big night.

Dave Williams foiled Jim Rankin's bid for a shutout as he scored for Swift Current midway through the second period.

Curt Shokoples scored three goals for the Oil Kings as they took period leads of 2-1 and 4-2. John Rogers produced the other Edmonton goal before a tiny crowd of 847 at home.

Marksmen for New Westminster were Ron Greschner, Bob Stumpf and Ron Kennedy.

The Oil Kings overcame a fine goaltending display by Terry Richardson, who blocked 43 shots, compared with 23 by Doug Soetart of Edmonton.

Lanny McDonald scored two goals and Tom Lysiak donated a goal and two assists in Medicine Hat's triumph over Vancouver before 713 fans. Ed Johnston got the other Tiger goal.

Bob Sperling and Gord Stewart replied for Vancouver.

The Charlie Hodge-coached Nats now face Victoria in a four-game series that begins Saturday night at Memorial Arena, starting at 8:30.

Victoria coach Mitch Pechet feels two weekend games (the second in Vancouver on Sunday) "may help resolve" Cougars' goaltending situation.

Danny Rogers, a 15-year-old graduate of the Saanich minor organization, will start for Cougars Saturday with 19-year-old Sam Clegg serving as the backup. Blaine Ferguson, another 19-year-old, will start Sunday with Clegg again dressing as the alternate.

Cougars plan to retain only one 19-year-old netminder, but Pechet said the decision to dress Rogers was made "because he has to have some work and now is as good a time as any."

Cougars also announced Thursay that suspended forward Bob Murdoch has been sold to Edmonton.

Murdoch was involved in a training-camp incident which included a curfew violation. After being suspended, he returned to his Cranbrook home.

SPAIN EARNS DRAW

LAS PALMAS, Spain (Reuter) — Yugoslavia and Spain drew 2-2 Thukday night in their Group 7 world Cup soccer qualifying match.

Knudson Tied With Palmer

NAPA, Calif. (AP) — Aging Arnold Palmer is fighting one of the longest slumps of his long golfing career. However, the veteran cut six strokes off par with a 66 and tied George Knudson of Toronto for the first-round lead Friday in the $150,000 International Kaiser golf tournament.

Palmer, 43, who has not won in about 15 months, and the long-haired Knudson held a one-stroke lead over Grier Jones, alone at 67.

Jones, winner of two titles and more than $100,000 this season, and Knudson played the north course at the Silverado Country Club and Palmer toured the slightly shorter south course.

They will switch courses for today's second round and the last two rounds will be played on the north course.

Canadians Trail By Five Strokes

BUENOS AIRES (Reuter) — Australia led after the second round of the Eisenhower Cup world amateur team golf championship with a total of 434 on Thursday.

Spain and Argentina shared second place at 437. Canada and the combined British and Irish team shared fourth at 439.

The United States, defending champion, was bracketed in sixth place with New Zealand at 441 while South Africa was eighth with 442.

There are 32 four-man teams in the 72-hole contest that is scheduled to end Saturday. An 18-hole playoff will be held Sunday in case of a tie.

Nick Weslock of Burlington, Ont. was the low Canadian scorer Thursday with a 71. Dave Barr of Kelowna shot a 72, Doug Roxburgh of Vancouver shot a 75, and Keith Alexander of Calgary was 79 for the round.

Huggins Leads Way As Invaders Romp

Oak Bay Invaders, sparked by three touchdowns from running-back Brent Huggins, closed out the regular Vancouver Island Bantam Football League season with an easy 46-6 victory Thursday over winless Juan de Fuca Tigers.

End Rick Cordick combined with quarterback Fred Carlson for two touchdown passes on plays that each covered 60 yards. Tom Gardner and Rob Parris, who also kicked four converts, scored the other Invader touchdowns.

Invaders meet fourth-place Saanich Chargers in one sudden-death semi-final at 1 p.m. Sunday at Royal Athletic Park. Saanich Hornets and Cowichan Chiefs meet in the other semi at 3.

Winners of both games will meet in the final, Oct. 29.

Chargers and Chiefs finished in a tie but the Cowichan club took third spot on the basis of victories in both games between the teams this season.

Vikings Continue To Avoid Defeat

University of Victoria Vikings, playing in the Victoria Intermediate League on an exhibition basis for six games, are not giving much to their hosts.

Vikings, however, are doing nothing but win. They made it four straight victories Thursday night by defeating Stockers North Americans 5-3 at Pearkes Arena.

Coach Ron Maxwell praised his "disaster line" for paving the path to victory. The third line of Gord Palmer, Brent Kaufmann and Terry Oscarson — none of whom had scored previously — each counted once.

McLachlans Spark Gulls To 6-3 Win

Barry and Brian McLachlan, Juan de Fuca's brother combination, paced the Gulls to a 6-3 win over Esquimalt A and W in a South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League game Thursday night at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Barry scored three goals and Brian added a single. Ed Nichols and Dave Archibald were the other Juan de Fuca scorers while John Entzminger (2) and Mike Briggs scored for Esquimalt.

Victoria gave Gulls sole possession of third place in the seven-team loop.

Sailing's Success Breeds Limitation

No better example of this is the Canoe Bay Sailing Club, which drew a fleet of 35 boats for a six-miler in Sidney waters last Sunday.

Peter White who, along with Gordie Inglis, founded the fast-growing club, reports that they're thinking of setting a ceiling on the numbers that can compete. It's not because of crowded start lines but because it takes so long to work out the results!

The CBSC can expect Royal Vic. skippers who prefer to keep their boats at the Tsehum Haven outstation rather than at Cadboro Bay taking more than a passing interest in CBSC racing.

For the first time since the outstation was opened, Royal Vic. has ditched its winter racing program there in favor of sailing at Oak Bay.

For those who are staying at the outstation because they want the best of two worlds — good winter cruising and some challenging racing — it appears that the CBSC is the logical answer. It provides good calibre competition in an area that's a Mecca for those who like to do more than use their craft as a racing machine.

Peter's White Squall came first Sunday, beating out Miles Dighton's Obsession, Will Jensen's Viking 28, Bud Peetz's Saki, Brian Saunders' Impulse, Bert Buchanan's Lairig Ghru, Geoff Greenhalgh's Yo-Yo, Dick Fisher's Tricky Dick, Willi Fahning's Lillebaelt and Dave Christian's Nirvana.

Another race is scheduled for 1:30 p.m. Sunday. The start will be off the Beacon Street government wharf at Sidney.

Royal Vic. boats will be pacing it out in a long-distance race at Oak Bay with the start gun being fired off Flower Island at 10 a.m. Boats of the Turkey Head Sailing Association will also be taking part.

THSA mustered 52 boats the first time around and 51 boats for the second race sailed off Oak Bay Marina last Sunday.

Division winners were: Cruising A, Ouzo; Cruising B, Jemmy; Thunderbirds, Lemolo; Haidas, Robert Van Den Dreissche's Noosa; Crown 23s, Kaya; Cal 20s, Jack Paterson's Menehune; Cal 29s, Jack Woodward's Puff.

In the second race the first 10 boats over-all were Greg Oliver's Sea Fax III, Gordie Vickery's Valhalla; Ouzo, Kim, John Watson's Pahquee, Jemmy, Steeve Merriman's Vandal. Lemolo, Hugh Porter's Errigal and Merph.

Division winners this time were: Cruising A, Valhalla; Cruising B, Jemmy; Thunderbirds, Pahquee; Haidas, Ray LeHuquet's Tanu; Crown 23s, Errigal; Cal 20s, Menehune.

This was the first time out for the new Jemmy, who topped her class in both events. It looks as if you have a hot one Gerry!

Series racing for both cruising class boat sand Sailerettes, is on Sunday's itinerary for the Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association. Things get under way at noon.

The first series racing for Royal Vic. frostbiters begins Saturday at 1:30 p.m.

Last week they opened the season with a sailpast and pennant racing. Chairman Ted Bowers reports that northerly winds that whipped up white caps in Cadboro Bay provided one of the fastest sailpasts in history.

In spite of the lusty wind conditions the hardest 'salts' still managed to get three races in.

Colin Huggett won in losers, being followed by Louise Anstey and Kaspar Schibli. In Enterprises it was Dennis Woodward, Ted Bowers and Nicholas Thornton.

This Sunday members of the Victoria Canoe Club will be exploring the San Juan River. Gerry Irvine is the leader for this trip and can be reached at 385-7573.

Any boat, whether she's registered in a yacht club or not, is eligible to compete in the Maple Bay Yacht Club's winter racing.

The first of an eight-race series will be sailed Sunday using PHRF ratings.

The club's novel single-handed keel boat race was postponed Sunday because of lack of wind and will be rescheduled later.

NORM ULLMAN ON SIDELINES

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League said Thursday centreman Norm Ullman will be sidelined for a minimum of three weeks with torn knee ligaments.

And the club announced that winger Pierre Jerry may be a non-starter in this weekend's home-and-home series against Detroit Red Wings because of a pulled tendon in his leg.

Both players were injured Wednesday night in a game against Pittsburgh Penguins, which the Leafs won 4-3.

RETIRED
WANTED Mature, ex-businessman or salesman to introduce Harley-Davidson golf cars (America's sales leader) to clubs and pros.
This is not a daily grind, but would require certain days or weeks in a year, concentrated and working with golf courses in Victoria and Vancouver. (We do represent B.C. though).
The challenge should be interesting and worthwhile, the earnings depend on accomplishment and probably not be immediate.
Nominal expenses would be provided, but the real remuneration would have to come from the sales and leases developed.
We're looking for the man that wants an interest in life and has the initiative to build and look after a business without constant supervision.

Hansen: Plans in Storage

And, while this is his first try at political office, he is not inexperienced. He was campaign organizer in the last provincial election for William Hartley, now British Columbia's minister of public works. He is president, and was one of the founders, of the UVic NDP Club.

Hansen, like all NDP candidates, wanted to talk about the issues. He summarized them into four categories:

ENVIRONMENT. There needs to be an entirely new attitude towards the "growth myth" including tough anti-pollution legislation. He favored amending the Criminal Code to make pollution a criminal offence and the setting of federal minimum standards to avoid "pollution havens" by provinces seeking to attract industry.

Action could also be taken under the Navigation and Shipping Act, the Seacoast and Inland Fisheries Act and application of a system of tax incentives and penalties in controlling pollution.

The offshore territorial limit should be extended to 100 or 200 miles for pollution control purposes.

He opposed use of supertankers in Canadian waters, saying generations would have to pay the price for one sinking, while it would be easier to clean up and correct damage from an accident with a conventional tanker. He was willing to pay higher prices for shippments of oil by conventional ships rather than super ones.

TAXES. He supports a taxation system which treats a "buck as a buck" with corporations paying their fair share. And, he adds, "no special concessions for co-operatives."

He describes the present system as "welfare for the rich" because of loopholes, as well as the government offering corporations "unnecessary and unfair tax concessions and subsidies."

Hansen gives these three examples, of people earning $10,000 a year, to illustrate the way things are:

Ordinary wage earner pays $2,800 in taxes; capital gains speculator pays $800 in taxes; corporate dividend earner pays $188 in taxes.

"Even worse," he says, are corporations receiving government subsidies and paying no taxes. He listed IBM, Proctor and Gamble, Falconbridge Nickle, Noranda Mines and Gaspe Copper Mines.

SENIOR CITIZENS. He supports a minimum federal rate of $150 a month, and tied to the cost of living, with removal of the 2 per cent per year cost of living ceiling. He noted that food prices alone are up 10 per cent in one year.

ECONOMY. Attack unemployment through spending on social programs with "everyone having the opportunity to work." Control of wages, prices and profits through a price review board. This board would compared profits to costs and if the increase was not justified, it would not be allowed. The same would apply to wages and prices. Company books would have to be open.

Hansen says a major issue is the "constant threat of war" and he promises, if elected, to be a strong advocate of peace and "the international community."

With his campaign in full swing, he rarely goes to classes at the university, where he is in his final year of economics and political science.

Before his nomination last spring, he was considering going to Carleton University in Ottawa to study journalism before seeking work as a newspaper reporter. Now that is in cold storage until the results on Oct. 30 are in.

No Blame Laid In Fatal Crash

NANAIMO (CP) — No blame was attached Wednesday by a coroner's jury inquiring into the death of John Burpee Aquilon, 25, of Vancouver and Michel Louise Thurston, 23, also of Vancouver.

The sports car the two were travelling in was involved in a multi-car accident at Haslam Bridge on the Trans-Canada Highway near Cassidy, Oct. 6.

GOV'T CLOSED ON NOV. 13

Provincial government offices will be closed Monday, Nov. 13 in observance of Remembrance Day, deputy provincial secretary L. J. Wallace announced Wednesday.

The Provincial Museum will observe the usual hours and will be open both Saturday, Nov. 11, and Monday the 13th, from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Immaturity was considered the primary reason for crimes committed by a 17-year-old sentenced on four charges by two different judges in provincial court Thursday.

Richard William Miller, 3205 Wetherby, was given a suspended sentence and a one-year probationary term for theft over $200, fined $35 for one count of theft under $200, and fined $50 for another count of the same charge by Judge Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre.

He was given a suspended sentence and placed on 18 months' probation for possession of a narcotic by Judge William Ostler.

Police testified that Miller stole a Volkswagen from a Victoria residence Sept. 28 and drove it to Nanaimo where he stole two rolls of adhesive tape, a bottle of glue and a car stereo tape-player.

He pleaded guilty to all charges Oct. 4 and was remanded to Thursday in order to obtain a pre-sentence report before sentence was imposed.

At the Oct. 4 trial, Prosecutor John Macintyre said, "There must be some explanation of this rampage and perhaps the probation officer can find out what it is."

At Thursday's session Macintyre said, "The circumstances indicate a degree of immaturity."

"This is a stage of the game that most people go through. It's just a part of growing up," said St. Jorre.

"I think that you feel that the restrictions imposed by your parents make you unacceptable to your peers," said Ostler.

He told Miller he was turning to crime to be accepted.

In traffic court, David Lloyd Arthur Fisher, 24, of 7—750 Pemberton, was fined $350 and given a three-month driving ban for impaired driving.

Two other men, John Mitchell Hughes, 59, of 3811 Synod, and Arnold Kenneth Knowles, 53, of 586 Whiteside, were fined $350 each for impaired driving.

City, CPR Talk

After bandying the subject around for some time, Victoria has got down to serious negotiations with Marathon Realty, a Canadian Pacific subsidiary, for purchase of the CPR waterfront property at the Inner Harbor.

Mayor Peter Pollen, who met Thursday afternoon with Marathon officials from Vancouver, said the city defined the area of the 6.5-acre property which it would "seriously consider" purchasing.

"We discussed the aspirations of the city in regard to the total Inner Harbor plan and also how the ticket office property is obviously somewhat superfluous to the CPR-Marathon organization," he said.

"We talked about the Ministry of Transport's renewal of certain shortly-expiring leases and they went away with the firm commitment that they would come back with an offer price to the city."

Once that price is known, the mayor said, council can start detailed discussion of the scheme's feasibility.

Asked if any mention was made of a possible land exchange with Marathon, Pollen said: "We indicated we would consider the possibility of swapping, say, the Crystal Garden site for the Inner Harbor site — but how council or the public would feel about that I just don't know."

Acquisition of the Marathon waterfront property is seen as vital to the city's long-range plan to ring the Inner Harbor with pedestrian promenades and walkways.

Flooring Dispute Unsolved

Negotiations were continuing today over the use of non-union labor on renovations and refitting of the cruise ship Pacific Star at the government graving dock in Esquimalt.

John Schibli, president of the Victoria local of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters, said union workers will be withdrawn if there is no resolution of the dispute today.

He also said pickets will show up wherever two floor-laying companies who have not signed new union agreements are found doing work. He identified the companies as B and E Floor Coverings and Joe Moestell Floorers.

Schibli said floor laying companies outside Construction Labor Relations Association had signed new agreements, but the two CLRA companies wanted to settle for less.

THE OAK BAY DOGS ARE DIFFERENT...

Oak Bay has a different breed of dogs — and people.

Appearing before council's finance committee Thursday to answer complaints about dogs running loose in the municipality, David Beeching, manager of the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, said Oak Bay "is by far the nicest customer" the SPCA has to deal with.

"By and large," he said, "this municipality's animal control is much better than the others.

"You have a different type of citizen in this area and their dogs are much better behaved."

Beeching, however, noted that Oak Bay dogs aren't quite ready for sainthood:

"You do get manure on the sidewalks," he conceded, adding in qualification, "but when I was in England I stepped on more manure in London than I ever do in Oak Bay."

He said the SPCA is stepping up its prosecuting program.

"We're beginning to prosecute more. When it is a clear offence of a dog on the loose the owner is given a warning the first time."

He said a charge is laid after the second offence, carrying a $10 penalty. Ninety-nine per cent of the fines, he said, are paid out of court.

"However, some people have been very irate because they feel their dogs are small and should not be considered the same as, say, a German shepherd."

He warned that Oak Bay and other municipalities will soon be asked to pay more for the pound and inspection duties carried out by the SPCA.

He said there had been no increase for three years and the SPCA had been carrying out a time study for the past three months to try to work out costs.

"We will be asking for an increase," he said, "but it won't be that gigantic."

E. Germany Frees Political Prisoners

BONN (Reuter) — East Germany will release all West Germans jailed for political offences and has granted special exit permits to 25 engaged women so they can marry in West Germany, it was announced today.

Bonn State Secretary Egon Bahr, who is negotiating a pact to normalize relations between the two German states, made the announcement at a news conference.

He said all West Germans imprisoned in East Germany for "political or other offences excluding crime" will be released under an amnesty next month.

The amnesty also covers an unknown number of East German citizens similarly convicted. But it was not specified whether they would subsequently receive permission to move to the West.

Referring to the special permits for the engaged women Bahr said he hoped this "modest beginning" would lead to a general reunion of engaged couples who are divided by the East-West German border.

The exit permits cover 43 persons because many of the women have children, Bahr said.

Bahr declined to disclose the exact number of those affected by the amnesty but it is believed here to run into scores if not hundreds.

The two concessions comply with demands made by Chancellor Willy Brandt. He has said all along he would not conclude a treaty acknowledging East Germany as a legal and sovereign state until it produces "relaxation on the human level."

Judgment Day for Representative of the Lord

A representative of the Lord delivered a message to Judge William Ostler in provincial court Thursday during a trial for possession of narcotics.

The message from Allen Donald Laatsch, 22, serving a sentence at Wilkinson Road jail, led to a discussion between the judge and prosecutor Robert Johnston concerning the "mental soundness" of the accused.

"I was sent here by the Lord to say something to you, through me, from him," said Laatsch.

"What did you wish to say," asked Ostler.

"You are the son of the devil. You are the enemy of everything that is good. You are full of evil tricks and everything that you do is trying to make lies out of the Lord's rules," said the accused.

"The Lord's hand shall come down on you now and you shall be blinded and you shall not see the light of day for seven years," he said.

"All your doctrine is false," he continued, "instead of telling people about the Bible you tell them of the Criminal Code."

Sympathizing with heroin addicts, Laatsch said, "you take them off the street and take them away from the thing they need the most and that's love."

"I'm bound by the laws of the country the same as you are," said Ostler. "When did this visitation come to you?"

"While I was in jail," replied Laatsch.

"I'm not sure, your honor, if he's mentally unsound," said Johnston.

"He has his own opinions to which he's entitled," said Ostler.

Ostler said the man appeared to understand the proceedings and asked him if he'd seen a doctor recently.

Laatsch said he'd had a regular check-up and he understood the proceedings.

A Victoria police constable testified that, while in a patrol car July 8, he observed the accused in the 900-block Government Street.

At the sight of the patrol car Laatsch fled on foot and the officer gave chase, also on foot.

He was apprehended and searched by the officer who said he found a cigarette stuck inside the wrapper of a chocolate bar. He said the chocolate bar was unopened.

Another constable testified that at the time of arrest he searched the accused and the chocolate bar was opened at the time.

The accused was taken to police headquarters and questioned. The cigarette was sent to a Vancouver laboratory and analysed as marijuana.

"How do you account for the complete contradiction in the evidence of these two officers?" Ostler said to the prosecutor.

Both officers said they had searched the accused, one officer said the chocolate bar was open and the other said it was not, said Ostler.

"The charge is dismissed," said the judge.

Laatsch was sentenced by Judge F. S. Green Oct. 6 to 21 days in prison for two counts of failing to appear in provincial court.

At that trial he told the court he didn't appear to face a causing a disturbance by being drunk charge June 28 because he was on Valdez Island the night before and had to build a raft to get back.

He told the judge he didn't appear to face a possession of narcotics charge Aug. 23 because "there was a full moon the night before."

"A full moon has a lot of bearing on what I do," he said. He told the court he "did LSD" and sat on the edge of a mountain all night.

"My head was sort of wrecked and I was kind of paranoid to come to court because I didn't know what was going to happen," he said.

"This is the year I will finally own a Mercedes-Benz."

"I've known about Mercedes-Benz' fine reputation for years. I've admired them from a distance. I've travelled as a passenger in them. Unbelievably comfortable. And the finish is superb.

"Friends who own one always praise the way it handles. And I admit I appreciate things that are well-engineered and show good workmanship, like my watch and camera.

"Of course, a Mercedes-Benz is costly. But not really much more expensive than the car that I own now. Well, why not? Dammit, I'm going to buy the one car that I've always really wanted to own. Yes, I'm going to make this the year that I will finally own a Mercedes-Benz!"

And how about you?

Do you share the same thoughts as those above? That is the kind of thinking that our dealers quite often hear from new customers.

If you do, you should really treat yourself to a test drive. That is the only way you can come close to appreciating the driving pleasure and security that comes with owning one of our automobiles.

A wide choice of models

Every Mercedes-Benz is the result of eight decades of engineering excellence—that stretches back to Karl Benz's historic Patent Motor Vehicle of 1886.

We have prepared beautifully illustrated booklets describing our current models in detail. You can obtain copies by visiting or phoning one of our dealers. In the meantime, here's a brief description of a few models.

220/220 Diesel The least costly Mercedes-Benz models yet with engineering features still unavailable on the most expensive domestic sedans. From $6,770*.

280SE4.5/SEL4.5 These Mercedes-Benz models are designed to give you the comfort of control. Control that eases tension that builds when you drive all day. A car truly designed for extended stays, not demonstration rides. From $12,595*.

450SL The classic grand touring car brought up to date. A sports car for all seasons with its removable coupe roof and soft roadster top. From $14,430*.

Arrange a test drive

The only way you can really experience the pleasure of owning a car built to a philosophy that places engineering and workmanship above all else is to arrange a test drive.

Merely visit or phone one of our dealers. He will make a car available at your convenience. We believe that after a test drive, you'll want to make this the year you will finally own a Mercedes-Benz.

"This is the year I will finally own a Mercedes-Benz."

Man. Autopac Has $3M Surplus

WINNIPEG (CP) — Premier Ed Schreyer confirmed Thursday that the projected surplus for the Manitoba Public Insurance Corporation this year will be close to $3 million.

The figure was revaled earlier in the day by provincial Liberal leader I. H. Asper who said the governnent should offer reduced premiums as soon as the increase is announced.

The Liberal leader said the government is deliberately accummulating the surplus and will announce reduced premiums "at an opportune time."

Schreyer said any changes in the Autopac rates will have to wait until the new premium year beginning March 1, 1973. The premier said the surplus, which will not be known until the corporation closes its books after the 1972 year, will be used to either reduce premiums or set up a premium stabilization reserve.

Royalty Cut

EDMONTON (CP) — Alberta's royalty fee structure for lumber producers will be reduced by about $2 Nov. 1.

An order-in-council passed this week by the provincial cabinet established the new rate at about $13.50 for each 1,000 board feet of dressed dimensional lumber, compared with $15.60 at present.

The reduction is a result of the Canadian dollar rising to parity with the United States dollar, a lands and forests department spokesman said. The royalty rate has been established monthly on a scale based on a United States forestry index, but with parity, it was necessary to revise the scale.

Changes Deplored

EDMONTON (CP) — Police Chief Fred Sloane Wednesday cited Playboy magazine and nightclub nudity as illustrations of a social change which has led to unsafe highway conditions.

Chief Sloane said at a luncheon sponsored by the Edmonton Safety Council that social changes have caused reduction of an individual's sense of responsibility to others, and he applied this to traffic safety.

He said there was a time when a person felt shame at receiving a traffic ticket. Today, the offender jocularly "waves the ticket in the air saying, 'look what I got.'"

'Urban Danger'

EDMONTON (CP) — Urbanization is leading to political imbalances within the country and could cause Canada to become a fragmented nation, Premier Alex Campbell of Prince Edward Island said Thursday.

"Current predictions forecast that the Canada of the future will consist primarily of five or six major metropolitan areas," the premier told the Canadian Club.

Urbanization brings with it a fundamental danger, he said.

"It is my theory that political power moves with the people.

"When our rural and semi-rural dwellers join the migration to the mass society, the political power of the nation moves with them ...

"As the voices calling for rural-oriented policies and priorities grow dimmer, those calling for urban considerations become lounder," he said.

Warning: Occasional coarse language and swearing — B.C. Director

Nothing Fazes Edward G.

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Edward G. Robinson, who at 78 has just finished his 101st movie, says he needs a sense of humor in his work to keep his sanity.

He continues his distinguished acting career with a twinkle in his eye, refusing to be impressed with Hollywood or himself.

Robinson demonstrated his attitude recently when MGM gave him a champagne reception to celebrate his 101st movie, Soylent Green, a science fiction story about overpopulation in the 21st century. Co-star Charlton Heston delivered a flowery speech, Robinson's oldtime leading lady Joan Blondell gave him a kiss, and onetime boss Jack Warner tossed in some wisecracks. Robinson cut a cake and responded with gracious thanks.

COLLECTS ART

Later he admitted: "This isn't my 101st picture. More like 120th. My God, I've done so many that I lost count long ago.

Except art. He was the first of the famous Hollywood art collectors, amassing a gathering of Renoirs, Gauguins, Corots and Matisses that made his Beverly Hills home an art-lover's paradise.

The collection was sold as part of the divorce settlement with Robinson's first wife. He has since assembled a more modest but equally lovely group of paintings and sculpture.

"Art is a surcease from sorrow; it makes your life livable. I never tire of my art, never."

Nor does he seem to tire of his acting career. He'll be 79 Dec. 12, but he continues at a steady pace. Earlier this year he made a film in Israel — "mainly so I could get to Europe again." He is performing in three television specials, travelling to various parts of the country.

"How long will I stay at it? As long as it's fun, as long as I can keep my sense of humor."

Grain Workers Sign Contract

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Grain Workers Union has signed a federally-sponsored agreement to end its 10-month dispute with five grain elevator companies.

Federal mediator Don Tysoe said Thursday that all that remains "after innumberable meetings and discussions" is for both the companies and the union membership to ratify their negotiating committees' decision.

The agreement provides a 40-cent increase in each of two years on a basic wage of $4.15 an hour, a dental plan and other improved benefits.

Oak Bay Delays Its Prefab Ban

An Oak Bay bylaw that would ban prefabricated and prepackaged homes in the municipality has been stalled until a local manufacturer is given a chance to show his houses.

Vern Hildebrand of 3M Building Components Ltd. appeared before the council's zoning committee Thursday protesting the over-all ban.

Saying he had begun to build prefabricated homes fairly recently, Hildrebrand said he had six men working in his plant on the old Victoria Machinery Depot's Dallas Road property.

Asked by Ald. Brian Smith how many homes he had built, Hildebrand replied, "I have put together four so far and I have two up."

Questioned by Ald Shirley Dowell how long it took to erect a prefabricated home, Hildebrand said it took two days for two men to assemble the house on the site.

Unlike most manufacturers of prefabricated houses, Hildebrand said he not only built houses, designed by himself and his craftsman, but also homes in designs chosen by a customer.

Asked about costs, Hildebrand quoted a figure of $14,200 for a three-bedroom house, 48 feet by 28 feet, excluding the price of a lot and sewer connections.

Smith told Hildebrand: "One of our major concerns is the standardization that often comes with prefabricated homes."

Showing a pamphlet advertising a model home built by a New Westminster manufacturer, Smith said if a whole subdivision with seven or 10 homes was built, using that plan "you might as well have a motel up there."

Assistant building inspector Harry Elsdon said in Oak Bay 12 different inspections are carried out during the construction of a home. He asked how such inspections would be made in a prefabricated house. Hildebrand said the bottom halves of all walls were left open so that inspections of wiring and other installations can be made.

Smith said it was obvious that Hildebrand's houses were not like the mobile homes which Geoffrey White, municipal engineer-planner, had seen being built in Penticton and described as being "long boxes" in appearance.

Smith said, "They're called mobile homes because they can be moved from the factory to the piece of land where they're dumped. Then, they're never moved again."

The committee decided to table the matter until aldermen look at three houses built by Hildebrand. The homes are at 1922 Laurel in North Saanich, Kangaroo Road in Sooke and Dallimore Road, just off Happy Valley Road.

The lands and buildings committee will recommend to council that it proceed with a bylaw amendment that will require certain lots in the Newport area to be 12,000 square feet instead of 9,000 square feet.

To a Bride of the Year —The One and Only Ev

Only a spineless reticence about speaking to any group numbering more than four and maybe the fact that I know too much about the participants has caused me to decline the invitation to propose the toast to the bride at what's sure to be The Wedding of The Year. My compromise is to be an usher at which, doubtless, I'll be as inept.

Nov. 11 is the date of the ceremony. It will be a remembrance day in more ways than one, bringing together, as it will, people whose paths have not crossed in 30 or 40 years.

The wedding will unite Miss Evelyn A. Caldwell, spinster, of Vancouver, better known to readers of the Vancouver Sun as the shopping-guide writer, "Penny Wise", and Mr. Gordon Root, of Victoria, widower, publisher of the Juan de Fuca News Review.

Back when the world was young, a full four decades ago, Evelyn and Gordon were among the unlikely, incredibly youthful company that put out the morning News-Herald in Vancouver, a staff-owned newspaper long since gone belly-up. Its demise scattered all of us to the four winds of journalism. Now, as the result of this most unexpected of love stories, it will bring us back together.

As it is at every wedding the bride will be, as the saying goes, the cynosure of all eyes. There'll be an extra reason for it at this particular wedding. The bride is, as it happens, the kookiest, funniest, zaniest and absolutely adorable woman in the entire world, a legend in her time, an Irish leprechaun whose courage, temper, heart and capacity for love are famed far and wide.

I know the temper. For a year or two I was Evelyn's city editor. Any well-meaning tampering with her copy was suicidal. She was, and doubtless i, deadly with a paste pot at anything up to 100 yards. Once, when I deleted a mere three words from her copy (the words, as I recall, were "By Evelyn Caldwell") I sought refuge in the men's room. To this day survivors will still own to a state of shock on watching Evelyn climb through the transom, paste-pot in hand, in pursuit of her cowering quarry.

I know the unpredictable, acting-on-impulse quality that is her way of life. Once, again as her city editor, I assigned her to a feature story on a new cargo-passenger Norwegian ship that had come into harbor. Five weeks later I was rewarded with a post card from Oslo. Evelyn was, she assured me, working on the story and wished I was there. The captain, it turned out, had invited her along for the passage home. What could be more natural than to accept?

She is a woman who has long believed that she can do anything and was doing it, as a woman, long before the notion of "liberation" came along.

They say that it nearly broke up the war when Evelyn hung her laundered lingerie outside her tent in Korea, but her front-line despatches from that particular conflict were the equal of any man's. On dozens of world-wide assignments she came through with highly personal, highly readable accounts of how it was.

She did, in fact, entirely remake herself. To call her "plain" in those years of so long ago was to understate the case. She looked like an un-made bed. She was one of the boys and dressed the part only too well. One day she just decided to change, just like that.

To our astonishment the baggy girl in the heavy oxfords became the chic and stylish woman of today. When she was teased once too often about her lath-like figure she went on a special diet which, it was rumored, required the daily consumption of two gallons of cream. Whatever it was the results were spectacular as they are to this day (Friday).

The new-look girl combined with the Irish joie de vivre that had been there all along and that has never flagged created a superior breed of woman and a superior breed of kook.

I know the depth of genuine sentimentality that lie beneath that effervescent facade.

Evelyn and I were once assigned as a team to cover a royal tour, a coast-to-coast safari by Elizabeth and Philip. Wherever they stopped, in the great cities and at whistle stops alike, there was the playing of the anthem. The Queen never batted an eye during these renditions, but time after time I saw that Evelyn's eyes brimmed with tears.

My curiosity demanded an explanation. "I keep hearing the words, 'God Bless Old Bill Caldwell! the lady explained. And Bill, 91 years of age now, will be there when his daughter goes down the aisle next month.

As I say, dozens of us who haven't seen each other in many years, will be gathering in the church when Evelyn and Gordon exchange their vows. Already there's been a renewing of friendships severed long ago by the diverging paths we've taken.

There's a funny thing about these preliminary reunions. Each of us had feared that they'd make us feel older than we really are. Yet quite the opposite has been true. Such is the powder of that giddy, everlasting girl and the power of love.

Coho Tranquillized, Tanked, Trucked

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

A skyline was slung across the river. Equipment moved along it and then lowered 200 feet to men waiting below.

Nets were used to trap the fish which were placed in milk cans and hauled to the road above. The coho were then transferred to a tank and trucked to spawning beds two miles up river.

Before being moved, the fish were immersed in a tranquillizing solution by Dr. David Groves, a biologist. This was to keep them from thrashing about in the tank and killing themselves.

Was the coho project worth all that trouble and labor?

"If you believe in miracles this is one which occurs in nature every year," said Al Meadows, vice-president of the society.

"These few fish will produce about 300,000 eggs," he said. "These in turn will provide the sea with countless thousands of coho salmon."

"Nature is a wonderful provider," he added. "If only we managed nature resoures properly."

The fish which were moved Thursday had been released in the river as fingerlings in 1968.

The society in 1968 decided to experiment releasing fingerlings upstream and helping the salmon to their spawning grounds years later.

Thursday's project was carried out by volunteers and the equipment donated by six firms. The project has the approval of the department of fisheries.

Meadows said some type of fish ladder could be built to help the fish up the river. Otherwise the fish would have to be trucked every fall to their spawning grounds.

"It should ensure that the Sooke River will always have a steady flow of water," he added. "At present other resources are not considered. In this day and age, this is a backward policy."

Meanwhile, federal fisheries officials announced the Sooke River and its tributaries will be closed to salmon fishing, angling or trolling, at 2 p.m. Saturday until further notice.

The move was ordered to protect the transplanted salmon.

NDP Leader to Speak In Oak Bay Saturday

Federal NDP leader David Lewis will be in Victoria Saturday as part of his three-day British Columbia campaign tour.

Lewis will arrive at the Empress Hotel at 12:30 p.m. on a chartered bus from Nanaimo with his wife and NDP stalwarts Grace MacInnis and Tommy Douglas.

From 2 to 3 p.m. Lewis will be on a CJVI open line show while his wife and Mrs. MacInnis open a tea and bazaar put on by the Grace MacInnis Club at the Sons of Norway Hall.

Local NDP candidates Flemming Hansen and Roger Smith will join the Lewis entourage for a public rally Saturday night at 8 at Oak Bay Junior High.

Lewis will leave early Sunday morning by ferry to Vancouver.

SLASH FIRES RULED OUT

Slash-burning on most of Vancouver Island has been banned by the B.C. Forest Service because of smoke pollution and unseasonably warm weather.

No open fires of any kind will be allowed along the east coast of Vancouver Island from Kelsey Bay south to Port Renfrew, including the Gold River and Port Alberni regions.

The ban, which went into effect midnight Thursday, was announced by Forest Protection Officer Don Owen.

High winds caused a number of slash fires in the Sooke, Cowichan Lake, Langford and Harrison Lake areas to burn out of control last weekend.

More than 380 men in the Sooke and Cowichan Lake districts are fighting forest fires which escaped from slash burning last weekend, a Vancouver Forest District official said.

Three of the fires are in the Sooke area and two in Cowichan.

He said the total number of acreage of forest lands involved has not yet been determined.

Meanwhile, the forest services branch announced Thursday that some forest companies may face charges because of the fires which got out of control.

Special Courtroom For Drug Charges

By BRUCE OBEE
Times Staff

The sudden influx of narcotics charges from last week's nation-wide drug crackdown will be dealt with in a specially reserved courtroom at the Victoria Law Courts building, 850 Burdett, lawyer Michael Hutchison said Thursday.

Hutchison, Crown prosecutor in most of the cases, said, "We will have a court in one of the unused courtrooms" in the building.

What is normally the small debts court has been reserved from Jan. 15 to 20 and Hutchison believes one trial each morning or afternoon, or two preliminary hearings per half day can be accommodated.

From a total of 27 warrants issued in Greater Victoria, 22 people have been charged in connection with the nation-wide sweep.

"It's been a week since it all began," said Hutchison. Some people haven't even elected trial method and already cases are being remanded into January.

The charges will still be read in the provincial criminal court at 633 Fisgard, but will be remanded, if an adjournment is necessary, to the reserved court.

Pre-sentence reports are often required before sentence is imposed and one week is normally required to obtain such a report.

Asked if persons convicted in the reserved court, who require a pre-sentence report, will be remanded for a week and sentenced in the criminal court on Fisgard, provincial court clerk Robert Davidson said he had no information.

Davidson said the reserved court will provide a tremendous relief for the criminal court.

The court will be staffed in the usual manner with a magistrate, court officers, a court clerk and a court reporter, he said.

Hutchison said there had been no decision as to which magistrate will preside but it will likely be Judge Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre or Judge F. S. Green.

A total of 43 warrants was issued for Vancouver Islanders before the national crackdown began last Thursday.

First to be sentenced was 26-year-old Norman George Urquhart, who was jailed for six years for trafficking in heroin.

Others charged with trafficking in narcotics are John Sinker, Dale E. Barber, Gerald T. Zaleschuk, David J. Petrie, Kenneth Raymond Robinson, Stephen C. Dennison, James Page, Lee A. Morran, Amarjeet Lagah, Robin John Van Hecke, Robert S. Taylor and Arthur Spelman.

New Court Open Early Next Year

The crush of cases in the criminal court section of the Victoria provincial court will be relieved with the opening of a new courtroom early in the new year.

Victoria's finance committee recommended Thursday that the contract for alterations and additions to the provincial court building at 633 Fisgard go to H. E. Fowler and Sons Ltd., the low bidder at $71,952.

"I would guess construction would be about three months so we could anticipate the opening of the new building early next year," said city manager Bill Hooson.

Provincial court clerk Robert Davidson said the courtroom will be situated where the clerks' office is located and a new clerks' office will be added to the back of the building overlooking Centennial Square.

It will be used primarily as a trial court and will be directed by the larger criminal court upstairs, said Davidson.

Public seating facilities will allow for about 20 people. Accommodation for more people will not be necessary because only those concerned with the trial will likely attend, said Davidson.

The overload of criminal court cases "has never been this bad," he said, "if this had been on the way this week's narcotics cases could have been put on in the new court."

Undecided Went NDP UVic Survey Shows

B.C.'s New Democratic government may have been elected by persons who did not vote in the 1969 election, a survey shows.

The Social Sciences Research Centre at the University of Victoria has completed preliminary analysis of a 30 per cent response rate to 500 questionnaires sent out to find out about influences on voting behavior.

Dr. Daniel Koenig, who conducted the survey with colleague Gary Martin, said Thursday the 1969 abstainers were nearly all old enough to vote.

Most of them were undecided about how they would vote, or whether they would vote before the writ was issued for the provincial election this year.

"Of the group of voters who were undecided about their voting intention before the campaign began, 56 per cent eventually voted NDP, accounting for 22 per cent of the total number of NDP voters," he said.

Although the NDP retained the support of most of those who voted NDP in 1969, the Liberals lost the support of half of their 1969 supporters within the sample, with 30 per cent shifting to the NDP in 1972, Dr. Koenig said.

The report shows that 60 per cent of those who voted Progressive Conservative, and 30 per cent of those who voted Liberal in the 1972 election had voted Social Credit in 1969.

Dr. Koenig said the intention of the survey was not to predict election results, but rather to explain them.

When the respondents were asked how they would vote if the federal election was held at that time, late August, the results showed: Liberal 31 per cent; NDP 26 per cent; Conservatives 15 per cent; Social Credit three per cent. Twenty-five per cent were undecided.

On the basis of his figures and referring only to the popular vote, Dr. Koenig said the contest in B.C. would appear to be between the Liberals and the NDP.

Dr. Koenig is planning to send out a second set of more than 1000 questionnaires to randomly selected voters, asking further questions.

Construction Contracts Set

Public Works Minister Bill Hartley has announced contracts awarded to two Victoria construction companies for government projects.

E. J. Hunter and Sons Ltd. has been awarded a $29,620 contract for renovations and extensions to the central microfilm bureau in the Provincial Museum building.

Council Chambers 'Misused'

Federal politicking in Oak Bay's municipal hall has raised the hackles of at least two Victoria federal candidates.

The taxpayer has more than a normal interest in the election. He's Clifford Stretch, Social Credit candidate for the Victoria riding.

Stretch's visit to the hall was triggered by the news that Liberal candidate David Groos had rented the chambers Thursday night.

Stretch says, "It's absolutely wrong. It's a flagrant misuse of the council chambers to have them being used for slanted politics."

He contends that party politics, whether on a gratis or rented level, should not enter the council chambers unless Oak Bay taxpayers are asked in a plebiscite whether or not they are in favor.

He tells of today's encounter with municipal administrator E. H. Hart:

"He told me that he had already arranged for the chambers to be rented to the Conservatives for a coffee party next week and I insisted that this was showing favoritism."

(Conservative candidate Allan McKinnon, contacted earlier, had said he didn't know that the chambers were available to him. His committee had made arrangements to rent the smaller Windsor Park pavilion for a coffee party on Tuesday.)

"It's possibly the method members of the Liberal establishment act towards each other. Not being a member of the select group we didn't know the municipal hall was available," he said.

Stretch said his meeting with Hart this morning was anything but a calm one:

"Mr. Hart said I was losing his vote on account of it and that all the press was interested in was selling papers."

Stretch added: "I've never heard of such a terrible thing as using municipal halls for politicking. It's just as bad as if the NDP or Social Credit used the Newcombe auditorium for all their meetings."

Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford, said the rental procedure had been in effect ever since the hall was built and was available to any organization.

VICTORIA'S FISH PRICES CLIMBING

No Breaks for Port Cities

family

WENDY DEY - EDITOR

By the time beer, fishing rod, tackle and boat are collected, the amateur fisherman in Victoria spends at least $5 a pound for that delicious fish he may be lucky enough to yank out of the water.

That may be expensive, but it's still an enjoyable alternative to paying escalating prices for fish at this port city's retail outlets.

"And more people are doing that — going out and catching their own—because they can't afford to pay as much as $1.50 for a pound of salmon or $5 for crab meat," says Larry Sutherland, manager of Coast Shellfish Co., Sooke.

Newcomers to Victoria who look forward to substituting fish for costly meat will be disappointed.

Prices Rise

A survey of local fish stores this week indicates that, although cheaper here than at inland centres such as Calgary, Victoria's fish prices are going up at the same rates.

"Just because we're right by the ocean doesn't mean we get to pay less," says Walter Rowe, manager of buying at Woodwards fish market.

"If we don't buy it, the wholesalers can ship them (fish) out just as easily to anywhere else and get as good or better prices for them," Rowe said.

Sutherland agrees: "There's at least 50 companies just waiting to grab hold of the fish when they come in, so the wholesalers have to pay a better price and so do the householders."

Sutherland said prices for a pound of salmon five years ago stood at the 80 cent mark. The consumer now pays anywhere from $1.29 to $1.79 per pound for the same fish.

"Because the supply is becoming steadily depleted, because the fisherman is getting more money than before, prices are going up. This year is one of the best examples."

At Woodwards, Rowe said, an increase of 10 cents per pound has been tacked onto crabs, scallops and oysters.

Up Again

Mrs. Germaine Sutherland, manager of the Fish Market on Island Highway, was also considering a price increase after a private survey of city stores showed prices had been raised again.

Halibut was to have been boosted from 95 cents to $1.25; shrimp (listed around 49 cents last year) was to have gone from this year's 69 cents to 75 cents; and sole fillets, from 98 cents to $1.15.

Because of possible press coverage, however, Mrs. Sutherland said her prices would remain relatively the same for the next while.

Calgary prices look something like this: ling cod, 69 cents; red salmon, $2.15; shrimp meat, $3.00; sole, $1.19; halibut, $1.85 and crab, $1.25 per pound.

'Dictate' Cost

"Because of the high degree of centralization and monopoly of the wholesale level, the wholesalers can pretty well dictate the prices for fish.

"They'll always be charging all that they consider the traffic will bear.

"Retail is also out to maximize its profit, of course."

Stevens agreed that higher prices are being paid this year to fishermen because of the competition level. The increase has hit all kinds of fish, but some more than others, he explained.

Because of the decreasing halibut supply, fishermen who were receiving 40 cents a pound in 1971 might be getting as much as 65 to 70 cents a pound this year.

"I want to make it clear, however, that it isn't because of the increase the fisherman gets that the prices in stores are higher.

"We've traced it out in various fisheries and the changes they make in the market are made before they give any increase to the fisherman.

"It's a case of soaking the public in advance," he said.

Wife's Nameless Role Ended Their Marriage

DEAR ABBY: I was in the same boat with "Nameless," whose husband of 20 years refused to call her by her name.

This nut I was married to for 13 years would never call me "Viola," which was my name. (It was always, "Tell your mother, etc.")

I once asked him why he never called me "Viola," and he said there was a little town by that name he hated.

I quit asking him to call me "Viola."

I'm glad we aren't married anymore. — Viola.

DEAR ABBY: This is in behalf of the man who has not called his wife by her first name in 20 years.

I, too, am such a man. I love my wife dearly, and although she has a beautiful first name, I have avoided calling her by her name during the almost 50 years of our happy marriage.

Why? Because there is an old Danish superstition that love for one's dear wife should be kept well hidden so the devil doesn't hear about it and do her harm out of sheer wickedness. Consequently a husband will refer to his beloved wife as "The Old Lady" or "The Old Woman" or something slightly degrading, should the devil be listening and identify her.

I realize it's only a superstition, but I've never been able to shake it. — Superstitious Dane.

DEAR DANE: Keeping quiet about one's good fortune, lest the devil "hear" you and reverse your luck is not only a Danish superstition —it's Jewish, too.

DEAR ABBY: Is it improper to put a return address on a card of sympathy?

A friend of mine said this should never be done.

Wondering

DEAR WONDERING: Your friend is mistaken. All mail should have a return address. And my sympathy goes to those frustrated postmasters and mail handlers who find millions of pieces of mail undeliverable because of insufficient, incorrect or illegible addresses, and NO return address.

All in The Same Boat

When their husbands go to sea, navy wives find themselves in the same predicament as single parents

—Bill Halkett photos

Marlene McShannon fixes her dishwasher

Club organizers discuss activities offered to servicemen's wives

A new club — founded this week by navy wives — will give aid and comfort to those hundreds of women who each year find themselves in the same boat as single parents when their husbands go to sea.

Members believe such a club necessary, as many wives of shipboard personnel are left alone for as long as four months at a time.

The more mature wives of servicemen stationed in Victoria know that the minute the fleet clears the harbor, the gremlins come out of the woodwork.

Children — apparently blooming with health when they kiss Dad goodbye — suddenly come down with fevers and well-cared-for homes begin to fall apart.

These women know about such disasters. And they also know how to carry on in the best tradition of the service despite flooded basements, accidents and all the other problems involved in running a home and caring for children singlehanded.

But for some of the younger, inexperienced women — particularly those anchored to the house by young children — the day the fleet sails marks the beginning of one long nightmare.

Often they are strangers to the community and have no one they can turn to for help and advice. Need, Victoria's telephone line for people in emotional crisis, says calls from frantic housewives peak whenever the fleet is at sea.

No One to Care

Last November, for example, Mrs. Marlene McShannon had to ask Family and Children's Service to care for her children, Geoffrey, now six, and Laura-Lyn, now 18 months.

Mrs. McShannon was new to Victoria and had no one she could ask to take care of the children when she required emergency treatment in hospital.

Now women in similar situations will be able to call on other service wives for help. The newly formed Pacific Command Wives' Club will provide a 24-hour emergency service, recreational facilities, free baysitting, a trained social worker, and information on community resources.

The club was sparked by Valerie Leir, wife of Rear-Admiral Richard Leir. Membership is open to wives of all service personnel.

Clubrooms are located in Building 37 at CFB Esquimalt. Facilities include a lounge, activities room, a babysitting service staffed by volunteers and office space.

Mothers will be able to leave their children in the playroom while they take part in activities, shop or simply talk to other adults in the lounge.

Mrs. Dorothy Hamilton, the newly-elected president, says "Just finding out that other wives have survived in similar situations can help a younger woman solve her problems.

"Younger wives always think their problems are unique," she said.

Emergency Numbers

The club will provide a list of telephone numbers a wife can call "when she's climbing the walls" and volunteers for help in emergencies.

"We have all had to take a sick child to emergency in the middle of the night," Mrs. Hamilton said.

In the past this has meant waking any other children and taking them along.

"Sitting in emergency half the night is bad enough without the company of tired children," Mrs. Hamilton said.

In such emergencies one club member will stay with sleeping children, while another drives the mother and her sick child to hospital.

Judging by their past experiences, members should be able to give sound advice in even the most off-beat emergency.

Peggy Montgomery, for example, can tell callers what to do when a child lets a bob cat loose in the house. She can also give instructions on how to disconnect a doorbell that freezes in the "on" position in the middle of the night.

"Things like this always happen when the men are at sea," Mrs. Hamilton said. "We can laugh about them now, but it's not funny at the time."

Dream Come True

About four years ago, when board members of Gorge Road Hospital were still looking at plans for a new extended care wing, I wrote in this column that I hoped when completed it would be named for the late Margaret Christie.

Now that wing is rapidly approaching a day when it will be officially opened. And Irene Warren, chairman of the hospital board, has assured me it is to be named for Mrs. Christie.

The honor is well deserved. I'm only sorry it did not happen to this dedicated woman while she was alive.

Why? Because it was through the foresight and determination of Mrs. Christie, then a Victoria alderman, that the land was acquired on which the Gorge Road Hospital buildings stand. That was nearly 30 years ago.

It was at a time when the only nursing care available for the aged-in-need was in a big house at the corner of Dallas Road and Douglas Streeet.

Became Inadequate

Along came a depression and that home soon became totally inadequate.

Margaret Christie, a determined Scot, then and there decided that something more had to be done for the "aged and the ailing" as sh always called those in need of nursing care.

As it happened the Crow Baker home and its five-and-a-half acres of land on Gorge Road came on the market just then.

By present standards the asking price was small. But in depression days, city council demurred at spending even a few thousand dollars to acquire such a place.

Alderman Christie held an opposite view. She fought to persuade council to buy the property and turn it into a nursing home.

Their enthusiasm and forceful arguments finally overcame all opposition and it was decided to acquire the Crow Baker place.

Immediately Mrs. Christie went about the work of opening the high-ceilinged pioneer home with an initial 25 beds. Mr. Winslow spearheaded a successful drive to find funds to assist in purchase of the property and for its maintenance.

Modern Replacement

In its place is a modern building of 100 beds, a spacious physio-therapy department and a big hydro-therapy pool. A plaque in a prominent position tells you this is the Edward Winslow Centre of the hospital.

Main purpose of this centre is rehabilitation of persons in all age groups with a fighting chance for recovery.

I'm a patient in that centre right now. And when I take my wheelchair out on one of the balconies to soak up some of this glorious October sunshine, I can see the wing that is nearing completion and which is to be entirely for extended care patients.

There is space for 300 beds in that wing, Mrs. Warren told me recently.

She also reminded me that many of those beds will be occupied by extended care patients now in our general hospitals, leaving beds there free for many more acute care cases.

So it is that Mrs. Christie's dream of care for "the aged and ailing" is at last coming true in a big way. And with fulfilment of that dream her initial fight for such care will be commemorated when the new building is dedicated and named the Margaret Christie Centre of the Gorge Road Hospital.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

FORECAST FOR Saturday, October 21, 1972
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Opposition makes itself felt. Stand up to challenge. Don't rush into contracts, long-term relationships. Emphasis is on marriage, the way you view the world. For best results, stick close to home base.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Secrets are revealed. Aries could play significant role. Truth should be faced even if it is not exactly to your liking. Avoid foolish arguments. Get points across in subtle rather than direct manner.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Don't say things you will later regret. This applies especially in course of lovers' quarrel. Emotional responses are accentuated. Nothing is apt to occur halfway. Older individual attempts to aid. Be receptive.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Base of operations changes. There is action in area that previously was still. Older individual is now willing to shake off lethargy. Don't be afraid of security threat. You will emerge victorious.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Hold off on trips. Tendency exists toward accidents. Check itinerary. Map your own individual path. Others may be confused. You must adhere to personal principles. Another Leo is involved. Be sure you are correctly quoted.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Obtain hint from Leo message. Protect valuables. One who is calculating wants you to commit yourself to financial fiasco. Know it and take proper precautions. Heed inner feelings. And count your change!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Broaden horizons. Look beyond the immediate. Perceive potential. Cooperate with Sagittarian. Cut through rhetoric. Get to heart of matters. Don't argue with mate, partner. Be aware of legal requirements.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be willing to replace outmoded parts, procedures. There is shakeup behind scenes. Don't battle progress. Find out what is expected by special group, organization. Get promises in writing. Study factual information.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Welcome contact with Libran. Romantic interests, hopes, wishes are highlighted. Get ideas on record. You deserve more credit than is being received. Know it and do something about it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-an. 19): Activity occurs in area of occupation and ambition. You don't have it all your own way, but you make solid impact. Means those who now oppose will soon do an about-face. Know it and proceed accordingly.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Avoid forcing issues. Let others state views. Key now is to be a careful observer. Listen and learn. Be discreet. You eventually gain if self-deception is avoided. Check with Pisces individuals.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Cooperate with Aquarian. Be sure you get money's worth. Some now tend to view you as one who can afford to lose. Don't permit this view to prevail. State policy and requirements. Be firm. Opposite sex is involved.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you have great sense of humor. You are versatile, have recently made beneficial changes and you are soon to create new home atmosphere. You are stronger than many might suspect. But you require more sleep than you have been getting of late.

Move to Winter Storage; Don't Forget the Soil

Even planters on apartment balconies are losing their summer flowers at last, though the African marigolds, geraniums and begonias have held out well beyond Thanksgiving.

To get something into the tubs and planters for winter and spring should be the immediate project.

Discard the summer plants; you have nowhere to put them for safe keeping where spring growth can be brought along. But don't forget their value as composted material for renewing the soil in your planters.

Keep one tub or planter for making compost. Cut up or break the discarded plants into six-inch pieces before putting them into the spare container, adding a sprinkling of soil over each layer.

Add also vegetable scraps, lettuce and cabbage leaves and stumps. Tea leaves, coffee grounds, eggshells, cigarette butts and ashes — all the same discarded pieces you put into a garden compost.

A sunny balcony in winter (notice that the sun takes a very low southern path during the next five months) will be brightened by growing winter blooming heathers. The early varieties have buds now; others bloom from January to March.

In between the plants you can sink pots of narcissi, tulips, hyacinths and crocuses. Covered with four to six inches of soil, they will be safe enough.

When the tops begin to show and buds develop, you might like to take indoors a pot at a time for closer enjoyment. You'll need to keep the leaves growing after flowering and replace the pots in the planters to mature after being indoors.

By May a few low growing annuals in with the heathers while the latter are still small plants will continue color on the balcony all summer into fall again, when the bulbs (summered in a corner still in their pots of dry soil) can be repotted with fresh soil from the tub of composted waste which has turned again into soil.

With a good gardener's luck, most of the bulbs will be in condition for blooming another spring — hard, plump and altogether healthy. If not, see that they are burned, and buy a few new ones.

Some apartment balcony gardeners are settling for ornamental shrubs, one to a tub, as a means of eliminating frequent care and changing of contents.

But as one gardener put it "with only three tubs instead of a whole garden, surely I have time to look after them."

Whatever space you have outside, don't miss the chance of growing something. You might come up with a rarely beautiful specimen of a kind other tub growers haven't had the courage to try.

SOLUTIONS MONDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

In today's deal, our South declarer came up with two plays which, to the naked, untrained eye, may appear to be of the "grandstanding" variety: he "wasted" two aces. On analysis, however, it will be observed that these two plays were the only correct ones.

Neither side vulnerable. East deals.

♡ Q J 10
◇ A J 10 9 7 3

WEST
♠ 10 8 7 5 3
◇ Q 6 5 4

♠ Q J 9
♡ K 9 8 6 3

SOUTH
♡ A 5 2
◇ K
♣ J 8 6 5 4 2

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 ♡	Pass	Pass	2 ◇
Pass	3 NT	Pass	Pass Pass

Opening lead: Seven of ♡.

South's original pass was sound. He didn't want to make a two-club overcall on his broken-down suit, and his hand wasn't of the right "shape" to make a take-out double. But when North reopened the bidding with a two-diamond call, South made haste to bid the game at no-trump.

The ten of hearts was played from dummy on the opening lead, and East made the correct play when he declined to put up his king. Had he played it, South would have had two entries to dummy in the queen and jack of hearts.

But South countered East's play by winning the trick with his ace. He then led his diamond king and overtook it with dummy's ace. He next led the diamond jack, discarding a spade from his own hand as West captured the trick with the queen.

West now shifted to the nine of clubs, and East's queen won the trick after the seven-spot had been played from dummy. East returned the spade queen, South's ace winning.

A heart has now led to dummy' jack, and when East took his king, dummy's queen had become an entry to the board. When play had ended, South had made two spades, two hearts, and five diamonds.

It would have been another story if declarer had permitted dummy's ten of hearts to have captured the opening lead. It would now have become impossible for him to have reached the board after dummy's diamonds had become established.

And, of course, if at trick two South had not overtaken his singleton king of diamonds with the board's ace, dummy's to-be-established diamond suit would have become uncashable, and would have languished on the table for the duration of the deal.

If this deal demonstrates any one thing, it would be that the slogan, "economy is the watchword," does not serve as a practical guide to winning play at the bridge table.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"4450." Steve repeated the number "That's an interesting one. It's the square of one less than its first half, added to the square of one more than its second half."

Charlie checked the boy's working. "You're right," he said. "43 squared plus 51 squared does make 4450. See if you can find any other 4-figure numbers that work that way."

You try.

(Answer Monday)

Yesterday's answer: SPLIT was 10987 (prime).

Jumper Sets Record

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Viktor Saneev, the Soviet Olympic champion, has broken the world record for the triple jump by clearing 17.44 metres — 57 feet, 2¾ inches. The previous best was 57-1 set by Pedro Perez of Cuba last year.

R—E—T—I—R—E—D
Mature, ex-businessman or salesman to introduce Harley Davidson Golf Cars (American Sales Leader) to clubs and pros. This is not a daily grind but would require certain days or weeks in a year concentrated and working with golf courses in Victoria and Vancouver. (We do represent B.C. though).
The challenge should be interesting and worthwhile, the earnings would depend on accomplishment and probably not be immediate.
Nominal expenses would be provided, but the real remuneration would have to come from the sales and leases developed. We're looking for the man that wants an interest in life and has the initiative to build and look after a business without constant supervision.
Kindly arrange for interview. Don Telford, 386-8424.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

Fainting Still a Woman's Woe

There are hundreds of cases in which there can be some doubts as to what caused patients "fainting." Practically every one of the patients who faints is a woman, men rarely faint. If a woman does faint, she commonly does it when something has gone wrong emotionally, and she is upset.

Many medical students have asked, "How can one tell the difference between fainting and epilepsy?" And I have had several answers. Usually the person who faints has to have someone around who can look on; there is no fun fainting if one has no audience.

Also, a person who faints practically never does it in the bathroom or somewhere in private, where there is no audience.

Still another very important point is that a woman who faints slumps gently to the floor and does not hurt herself. The epileptic commonly goes down with a tremendous bang as if his legs had been kicked out from under him.

Many a time I have see a man with an epileptic convulsion fall so hard that he has split his scalp. The epileptic when he falls does so without any temporary excitement, or without being upset about anything.

Some epileptic spells come at night, while the person is lying flat in bed. An epileptic who falls heavily, perhaps while at work, may lie unconscious for a half hour or more afterwards; and when he wakes up, he may be a bit surly. The woman who faints usually gets up quickly and can go back about her business.

In many families where there is an epileptic, the people use the term "fainting" as a euphemism; they know that it is epilepsy.

INFLAMMATION OF THE SKIN

Every so often a somewhat psychopathic person, perhaps a woman, will scratch her skin so much that it looks as if there was a rather serious skin disease there. All skin specialists have to keep watching out for these so-called artificial or, as we physicians call them, "factitious," skin lesions.

I remember a day in 1926 when a woman, with what looked like a severe disease of the skin of one leg, came to the Mayo Clinic to see Dr. Charlie Mayo. He recognized at a glance the nature of the big scratches, and told one of his assistants to put a plaster cast over the affected leg.

In a few weeks, the assistant took off the cast, and the skin was healed. For months the doctors in the patient's home city had been trying to heal the inflammation and had failed.

The trouble was that the girl's parents wanted to send her some 5,000 miles away to a college.

She was afraid to go, and so she got out of that by becoming "ill" with the "skin disease."

Occasionally, a child will mutilate himself in order to escape having to perform some duty that he didn't want to be bothered with. I know of cases in which the child used an irritant chemical that was around the house, such as lye or a detergent of some kind. Naturally, this can cause the child very serious harm, and such a child needs help from a kindly doctor or a sensible psychologist who can find out what is troubling the child and can help him to find a better solution to his problem.

Club Takeover Bid Nipped

OTTAWA (CP) — The immigration department said Thursday an attempt by a U.C. crime syndicate to take over nightclubs in Vancouver, and eventually expand to Calgary and Edmonton, has been thwarted.

A spokesman said the move was halted after the B.C. Liquor Board cancelled the liquor licence of a nightclub leased by the syndicate and the immigration department made it clear it would do everything possible to keep a top "front man" of the Seattle-based group from obtaining landed immigrant status.

The spokesman said the actual head of the syndicate is a nightclub owner with a string of convictions for such offences as threatening, contributing to juvenile delinquency and transporting gambling equipment across state lines.

He said the man never visited Canada himself, but sent others to Vancouver in 1970 where they incorporated a holding company and leased a nightclub for a five-year period. Negotiations were also started to buy a second club.

Vancouver police, the RCMP and immigration officials, alerted by U.S. authorities, placed the group under surveillance and began investigating their backgrounds, he said.

By late 1971, the department had learned that the group planned to buy many of the "known clubs and cabarets" in Vancouver and eventually control the prostitution and drug trades from these locations.

Both Vancouver police and immigration officials now are satisfied the syndicate has given up efforts, for the time being, to move into western Canada, he said.

TENDERS FOR EXTERIOR PAINTING OF MEMORIAL ARENA

Sealed tenders, on the form and in the envelope provided for this work, will be received by the City Clerk, City Hall, Victoria, B.C., up until noon on Thursday, October 26, 1972.

Each tender must be accompanied by a performance bond in the form of a certified deposit cheque equal to ten per cent (10%) of the total amount of tender, made payable to the City Treasurer. The above deposit will be returned immediately following placement of the contract. The deposit of the successful bidder will be retained until the contract has been satisfactorily completed.

Specification and form of tender may be obtained from this office. The lowest or any tender will not necessarily be accepted.

Home Recipe Plan Takes Off Ugly Fat

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of unsightly fat right in your own home. Make this home recipe yourself. It's easy, no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your drugstore and ask for Naran. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoonsful twice a day as needed and follow the Naran Reducing Plan.

If your first purchase does not show you a simple easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't disappear from neck, chin, arms, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow this easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly bloat disappears—how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.

'Cut Costs, Cut Care'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dr. Allan Hay told the 55th annual convention of the British Columbia Hospital Association Thursday that many medical services are not really necessary.

"If politicians are really determined to cut costs they've really got to cut the amount of care. There's absolutely no other way," said Hay, executive director of the Ontario Hospital Association and Canadian delegate to the American Hospital Association's house of delegates.

"One of the jobs we (hospital administrators) have to do is persuade the population that they don't really need the kind of care they've been getting and certainly don't need so much.

Hay also said the B.C. Hospital Association members should not be "bowled over" with the idea that community clinics and ambulatory care will automatically make health care cheaper.

"If we are going to have everything we are short of now . . . we are going to end up with facilities very much more expensive than we've got now, and the bill is going to be bigger yet," he said.

Hay said the Ontario Hospital Association has made an offer to investigate the costs of a community clinic "to see if the care it provides is any cheaper than that in the nearest hospital."

"Ambulatory care can be cheaper," he said. "But if we have got to build and construct a whole new system it's going to load up with another overhead."

Dr. Richard Foulkes, consultant to B.C. Health Minister Dennis Cocke, told the convention that if B.C. adopts a trend currently appearing in North America, doctors now in private practice on a fee-for-service basis will likely switch to community clinics and be paid on a salary basis.

Foulkes, former administrator of New Westminster's Royal Columbian Hospital, has been appointed by the provincial government to recommend improvements to the system in B.C.

He told the convention that community clinics, recommended in the federal government's Hastings report as an alternative health care system, are likely to be less expensive than the current system.

But he said doctors would have to be paid on a salary basis. Foulkes said community clinics would be primary treatment and diagnostic centres and would not have acute-care beds.

CIA SNEAKS SPUTNIK SNOOP

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Central Intelligence Agency once managed to steal the Soviet Sputnik for three hours, but much of its high-level snooping has been bungled, says a former CIA agent.

Patrick McGarvey offered that glimpse behind the barriers of secrecy in his new book, CIA—The Myth and The Madness. He criticizes the government's primary intelligence gathering arm as an "insufferable bureaucratic morass with little or no direction, sorely needing drastic change."

McGarvey spent three years with the CIA and performed other intelligence work with the army's National Security Agency and Defence Intelligence Agency from 1955 to 1969.

The writer related this account of the theft of the satellite while on a world tour in 1958.

"The Sputnik display was stolen for three hours by a CIA team which completely dismantled it, took samples of its structure, photographed it, reassembled it and returned it to its original place undetected."

The CIA, he said, refused to allow him to name the country where the incident occurred. The manuscript was submitted to the agency for pre-publication review in compliance with the secrecy agreement he signed when he was hired, McGarvey said.

Gov't System Poverty Cause

Independent candidate for Victoria Dan Heffernan told an all candidates meeting Thursday there are over four-and-a-half million Canadians living in poverty.

"The system in which a lot of Canadians prosper is the same system that keeps people in poverty," he said.

Heffernan said the only fair system of taxation is negative taxation and lowering the tax ceiling to 51 per cent was not beneficial to the majority of Canadians.

The two Victoria daily papers were accused of "biased and irresponsible coverage" Thursday by Victoria NDP candidate Fleming Hansen.

Speaking to supporters at NDP headquarters, Hansen said, "not only is the importance of the election of local candidates in general being downgraded, but also the coverage has an obviously anti-NDP bias."

He said the papers have preferred "cheap mudslinging and relatively minor issues" to the real issues NDP candidates have been focussing on.

Allan McKinnon, Conservative candidate for Victoria, told an all candidates meeting Thursday his party would support the establishment of a Youth Employee Section in the Department of Manpower and Immigration.

He said he would also support the setting up of a network of youth manpower centres and establishment of a Canadian Employment Youth Directorate to research the causes of youth unemployment and alternative employment programs.

An Environmental Corp within the Department of the Environment is needed, McKinnon said, to employ young Canadians on clean-up and environmental operations.

Federal New Democratic Party leader David Lewis' attacks on corporations are "aimed at the foundations of our prosperity," Esquimalt-Saanich Liberal candidate Louis Lindholm said Wednesday.

"Surely it is hypocritical for this left-wing party to seek support for business while its national leader is carrying on a vicious diatribe against the commercial enterprises which form the very basis for our economic security in Canada," Lindholm told a campaign meeting.

Roger Smith, NDP candidate in Esquimalt-Saanich, said Wednesday that other candidates are resorting to their imagination or even lies because they are running out of issues.

"Mr. Tisdalle has said that an American union is sending $6,000 to every NDP candidate with a further $2,000 if required," Smith said. "This is simply not true."

Smith said Thursday he would try to get his constituents more involved in the political process if elected.

He promised to open three offices in the riding with all phone calls relayed daily to Ottawa, to return to the riding every second week, to inform all interested groups of impending legislation and send questionaires on a regular basis to all constituents.

Groos said NDP leader David Lewis' promises add up to 3.9 billion dollars.

"As Mr. Turner observed here last week — Canadians are too sophisticated to have their votes bought with their own money," Groos said, "... it concerns me that the Conservatives have also entered into this auction for votes. Their promises, according to Mr. Turner, exceed two billion dollars — that's Conservatism?"

Memorial Planned

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — President Nixon has discussed plans to create a memorial in Atlanta to the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., entertainer James Brown said Thursday. Brown said the president also told him he would push for legislation to make the slain civil rights leader's birthday a legal holiday.

Television Questions and Answers

By RICHARD K. SHULL

Q: A few years ago there was a show about a college "drop in" who ran a sandwich truck on campus. The name of the series was Hank. Who played Hank? My friend says it was Bob Denver. I disagree but can't recall the actor's name. — E.D.

A: Richard Kallman was the actor, a young man with an ego as big as the whole outdoors. The show lasted part of the 1965-66 season on NBC. Kallman went back where he came from — legitimate theatre.

Q: Tell me if Peter Marshall of Hollywood Squares is related to the Peter Marshall in the book, A Man called Peter. Also, is Jim Nabors married? — A.E., Victoria B.C.

A: The late minister of whom the book was written was named Peter Marshall. The game show emcee's real name is Peter Laycock. And no, Nabors is not, nor ever has been, married.

Q: Tell me how old is Paul Anka? We are having a discussion and I say he is over 32 years of age. — J.T.H.

A: You erred. Anka was born July 3, 1941.

Q: A John Beradino plays daily on General Hospital. My son-in-law thinks he is a former league baseball player. — C.E.O.

A: He's right. Under his real name of John Bernardino, the 54-year-old actor started his baseball career in 1939 with the St. Louis Browns. With time out for World War II he stayed with that team until 1948, then went with the Cleveland Indians at second base in time to play on the 1948 World Series championship team. A leg injury put him out of baseball in 1953 and he switched to his second big interest, acting.

Q: This is really three questions: When was the first football game telecast? How many games have been on TV? And how long do you think it will go on? — P.S.E.

A: According to Philco, which operated experimental station WPTZ-TV in Philadelphia, the first telecast of football was on Oct. 5, 1940, of a college game in which University of Pennsylvania skunked the Maryland Terrapins, 51-0. Since then, some 3,000 games have been telecast. As for the future, we'll probably have pro games nightly, with maybe breakfast matinees between second-division teams.

Q: Can you tell me if the man who played Superman was killed or committed suicide and how was it done? — J.L.L.

A: Both. George Reeves killed himself with a gun in 1956.

MOVIES

Friday

The Mouse That Roared (xxx), on 13 at 7:30. Peter Sellers stars in this delightful comedy about a small, bankrupt country that declares war on the United States — and wins!

The 25th Hour (xxx), on 12 at 9. A 1967 comedy-drama about a Romanian peasant falsely singled out as a Jew and sent to a German labor camp. Good cast with Anthony Quinn and Virna Lisi.

Key to Ratings:
Excellent XXXX
Good XXX
Fair XX
Poor X

Monkey Business (xxxx), on 11 at 11. A Marx Brothers comedy classic — vintage 1931.

The Mystery of Edwin Drood (xxx), on 7 at 11:30. A 1935 movie adaptation of Charles Dickens' final — and uncompleted — novel about a choirmaster who leads a double life. Excellent cast with Claude Rains and Heather Angel.

Sweet Bird of Youth (xxx), on 12 at 11:30. Paul Newman and Geraldine Page give fine performances in this 1961 movie adaptation of the Tennessee Williams play about an ambitious drifter and a faded movie queen. Supporting actor Ed Bagley won an Academy Award for his performance.

Here Come the Waves (xx), on 2 at 11:50. A 1944 wartime musical starring Betty Hutton and Bing Crosby.

This Love of Ours (xx), on 13 at 12:30. Merle Oberon and Claude Rains star in this 1945 drama about an unfaithful wife and mother who returns to her husband after an absence of twelve years.

She Done Him Wrong (xxx), on 12 at 1:35. Mae West and Cary Grant star in this 1933 western drama about the star performer of a notorious beer hall of the 1890s.

Saturday

The Steel Claw (xx), on 13 at 1. A Second World War adventure-drama about a U.S. Marine who rescues a general from a Japanese prison camp.

Gunfight at Red Sands (x), on 7 at 2:30. Italian-made western.

Wee Willie Winkie (xxx), on 11 at 2:30. John Ford directed that elaborate version of Rudyard Kipling's story about a child who helps the British Army end an uprising in India. Starring in this 1937 adventure is Shirley Temple and Victor McLaglen.

Tumbleweed (xx), on 13 at 4. Yet another western, this one starring Audie Murphy.

The Ballad of Andy Crocker (xxx), on 7 at 6:30. A 1969 TV movie starring Lee Majors and Joey Heatherton about the civilian readjustment problems of a Vietnam war hero.

Take Her, She's Mine (xx), on 12 at 7. A 1963 situation comedy that takes a look at the growing pains of an overprotective father and his college-coed daughter with James Stewart, Sandra Dee and Audrey Meadows.

Romeo and Juliet (xx), on 13 at 7:30. A lavish version of the Shakespeare classic, with the emphasis on action. Italian-made and starring Geronimo Meynier and Rosemarie Dexter.

Inherit the Wind (xxxx), on 6 at 8:30. This 1960 drama was suggested by the famous Scopes trial of 1925, when a young Tennessee teacher was accused of teaching evolution to local youngsters. Excellent cast with Spencer Tracy, Fredric March and Gene Kelly.

Return of the Seven (xx), on 2 at 9. A sequel to the Magnificent Seven about a band of adventurers who rally to the aid of Mexican peasants being used as slave labor. Yul Brynner is the only member of the original cast in this 1966 western.

Fools' Parade (xxxx), on 5 at 9. James Stewart stars in this excellent chase adventure that involves a battle of wits, guns and dynamite set in West Virginia during the Depression. This 1971 film boasts a strong supporting cast with George Kennedy, Strother Martin and Ann Baxter.

They Might Be Giants (xxx), on 8 at 9:30. George C. Scott and Joanne Woodward star in this 1971 comedy set in New York City. It's part whimsy and part social commentary, about a man who thinks he's Sherlock Holmes, and searches throughout Manhattan for Holme's archenemy Moriarty.

I've Lived Before (xx), on 13 at 10:30. After a plane crash, a commercial pilot recovers consciousness and believes himself to be a First World War pilot who was killed in 1918. Tiis 1956 drama stars Jock Mahoney and Ann Harding.

The Legend of Lylah Clare (xxx), on 7 at 11. An off-beat melodrama about an unknown actress who is hired to make a movie re-creating the tragic life of a 30s movie queen. Good cast with Kim Novak, Peter Finch and Ernest Borgnine.

Sodom and Gomorrah (xxx), on 12 at 11. An above-average Biblical spectacle starring Stewart Granger, Pier Angeli, Stanley Baker, Rosanna Podesta and Anouk Aimee.

Is Paris Burning? (xx), on 5 at 11:15. A star-studded cast highlights this otherwise confused account of the liberation of Paris from the Nazis. Starring in this 1966 drama are Orson Welles, Alain Delon, Kirk Douglas and Glenn Ford.

They Might Be Giants (xxx), on 6 at 11:15. (See earlier for details.)

Anatomy of a Murder (xxx), on 8 at 11:30. Otto Preminger's 1959 adaptation of the best-selling novel about a Michigan lawyer who defends an Army Lieutenant on a murder charge. Excellent performances by James Stewart, Lee Remick and Ben Gazzara.

Wabash Avenue (xx), on 4 at 11:45. Betty Grable, Victor Mature and Phil Harris star in this 1950 musical comedy about two men who vie for a casino and the love of its star singer.

The Pit and the Pendulum (xxx), on 2 at 12:10. Vincent Price stars in this 1961 movie adaptation of Edgar Allen Poe's Gothic horror classic. The movie is highlighted by atmospheric sets and excellent photography.

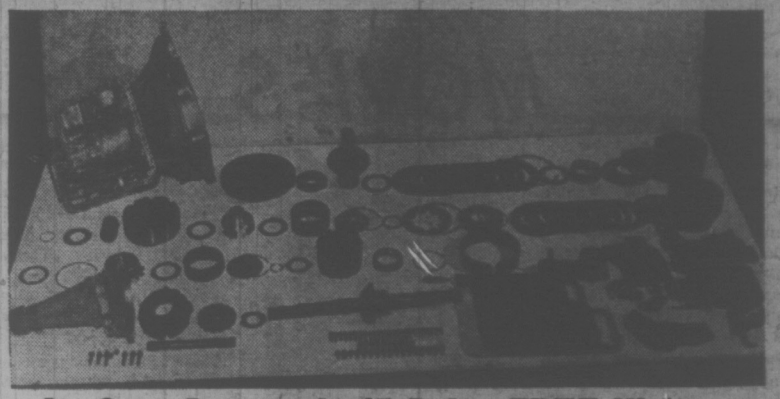
Top of the Month, on 7 at 7. Tony Randall hosts this series of monthly specials featuring comedy, music and facts in an almanac format. Tonight, Lorne Greene joins Tony in a humorous and historical look at the month of October. (30 mins.)

THERE'S A NEW LOOK to CBC-TV's Sunday night current affairs series, Weekend. Most obvious of the changes is the new co-host team of James Eayers and Charlotte Gobeil. Other changes include a trend toward more immediacy in style and content and a return to 'live' telecasting.

THE DISCOVERERS—the story of the discovery of insulin by Drs. Banting and Best is dramatized on CBC-TV's Sunday at Nine series, October 22 on Channel 2 and 6. In this scene, left to right, Michael J. Reynolds as Banting, Richard McKenna as Best, and Colin Fox as Gilchrist, join in a moment of triumph at the realization that the serum for the control of diabetes has been proven effective.

"IS THAT ALL FOR ME?" asks Allan McFee as Max Ferguson proudly shows him one of his famous Christmas cakes. Max also cooks up a satiric sketch each weekday on The Max Ferguson Show, heard at 2:30 p.m. on CBC-AM Radio. As well he mixes in a generous portion of his own choice recordings and friendly banter with his longtime cohort, Allan McFee.



Lo-Cost Automatic 17 Point FREE Written Diagnosis Puts Your Mind at Ease

LO-COST AUTOMATIC, A LOCALLY OWNED COMPANY, HAS DESIGNED THIS FREE CHECK-UP TO SAVE YOU MONEY

1. Road Test

A qualified technician takes your car on a test run to verify the shift points at different speeds and the progressive action of your transmission in forward and reverse.

Green Grass of Wyoming (xx), on 4 at 9:30. A horse drama, especially good for children about wild stallions, frisky mares and trotting races. Good cast with Peggy Cummins, Charles Coburn and Burl Ives.

This is My Love (xx), on 13 at noon. Jealousy and murder highlight this 1954 drama about the romantic rivalry between two sisters starring Linda Darnell, Dan Duryea and Faith Domergue.

Four Queens For an Ace (xx), on 6 and 8 at 12:45. A French-made spy thriller about an international criminal who changes his identity to elude the police.

Gunfight at Comanche Creek (xx), on 5 at 4. An Audie Murphy western.

Frontier Hellcat (xx), on 7 at 4. A tongue-in-cheek German-made western about a clash between the law and outlaws masquerading as Indians. Stewart Granger and Elke Sommer.

The Harness (xxx), on 13 at 7:30. This TV drama was suggested by the Steinbeck novel of the same name and was filmed on-location in

JOANNE WOODWARD
... on 5 at 9

Steinbeck country — Salinas, California. Lorne Greene plays an aging farmer intrigued — and tormented — by a young unwed mother with an infectious love of life.

They Might Be Giants (xxx), on 5 at 9. George C. Scott and Joanne Woodward star in this 1971 comedy filmed in New York City. Part whimsy and part social commentary, it's about a man who thinks he is Sherlock Holmes.

After the Fox (xx), on 4 at 10:30. A 1966 farce about a con artist who posses as a movie director in order to smuggle gold into Italy. Excellent cast with Peter Sellers, Victor Mature and Britt Ekland.

Cutter's Trail (xx), on 7 and 12 at 11:30. A made-for-TV western starring John Gavin and Marisa Pavan.

Out of the Past (xxx), on 2 at 11:50. A complicated but intriguing 1947 crime drama starring Robert Mitchum, Jane Greer and Kirk Douglas.

Voyage to the End of the Universe (x), on 6 at midnight. Routine sci-fi.

The Violent Ones (xx), on 8 at midnight. Three drifters are victimized by lynch law and prejudiced when they are arrested for murder in a small town. Cast includes Fernando Lamas and Tommy Sands.

The Blue Dahlia (xx), on 12 at 1:35. A navy flyer returns from the war only to find that his wife hes been unfaithful. This 1946 drama stars Alan Ladd and Veronica Lake.

NBC will provide Elvis Presley with a global audience for a 60-minute musical program in January. The program, originating in Honolulu, will be transmitted live-via-satellite on Jan. 14 to countries in the Far East. The 28 nations in Eurovision will telecast the program on Jan. 15.

Barbara Anderson

From Ironside to Mission: Impossible

By DAN LEWIS

NEW YORK — For a while after she got married, Barbara Anderson did the things a housewife might normally do. She took care of the house and the gardening and cooked for her husband. She played tennis a couple times a week.

But it wasn't enough to keep a girl busy, especially after she had spent four years as a regular in a series like Ironside.

So Miss Anderson began to look for more things to do. She took a gardening course at UCLA, registered in a school for gourmet cooking classes and a French course at the Alliance Francais. She also enrolled in several communications courses at UCLA and a house-decorating course in Los Angeles.

"I was happy with everything I was doing," said Miss Anderson "I just couldn't drop out. I'm a very active person and I wasn't about to sit around, watch TV and eat bon bons."

After she wed Don Burnett, a former actor, now a stockbroker, she released her agent and canceled her answering service. "I just got rid of everything," she explained.

Before she and Burnett married, Miss Anderson says she asked him if he would mind if she gave up her career. "He said do it," she revealed, and so she quit.

But retirement from show business isn't all that easy, especially if you had been working, as Miss Anderson did, for 10 years, from age 16 to 26, virtually without letup.

So after less than two years of inactivity, Miss Anderson began to think about resuming her career.

"I wanted to see if 10 years had gone down the drain," she observed. It didn't. In no time at all, she was back in action — literally.

Although it's only temporary, she's the new girl on Mission: Impossible. She'll be seen in seven episodes this season, but because they won't run consecutively, it will give the appearance that she's there for the season.

Actually, she was only to do six of them because the regular girl on the show, Lynda Day George, was having a baby. Lynda gave birth to a boy in June.

"They asked me to do the seventh," Miss Anderson explained, "because Lynda had trouble taking off weight after the birth." Then Miss Anderson reflected for a minute on what she had said, and added, "I don't know whether I should say that."

In fact, the show's producers had been hoping Miss Anderson would do three more to make it an even 10 episodes, until Lynda Day George was ready to return. When Miss Anderson couldn't accept, three other actresses were signed on for guest appearances: Barbara McNair, Elizabeth Ashley and Marlyn Mason.

Miss Anderson confided that she was unhappy before she left Ironside. "I was bitter, tired of everything. I hadn't seen any growth in my character," she declared. "I didn't know I had a figure. Everything I wore was tailored. Now I know I have a figure. Not that I take anything off, but I wear jerseys all the time."

Despite the dissatisfaction with the way her role developed at Ironside, Miss Anderson does acknowledge that the series gave her a chance to get started and become known. "But everything I did was at NBC. For four years, I didn't know there was any other network."

When she decided to return to work, with her husband's encouragement, she got herself an agent again.

Within a week, she was back in a series. "I walked into the office one day and he told me they were looking for someone to take the role at Mission: Impossible." Was she interested?

"I told him I was interested," she continued. A meeting was arranged with the producers "I knew going in everything was right."

A few days later, she was told the role was hers.

Mission: Impossible is more demanding, according to Miss Anderson, than Ironside. It is more physical, too.

"In Ironside I was just there to fill in. Now, I play the feminine lead. I'm a very important lady in the operation of IMF. I play at least two characters — I'm the provocateur. In Ironside my role was cut and dry."

She's completed her seven episodes on Mission: Impossible and will now consider other roles after a brief rest.

Wedding Hint Dropped in Victoria

By JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD — Up to Stockton to visit with those famous newlyweds — George C. Scott and Trish Van Devere.

George is starring in Oklahoma Crude for Stanley Kramer along with Faye Dunaway, John Mills and Jack Palance.

I thanked Trish for giving me a scoop up in Victoria, B.C. That was only a few weeks ago that she said, "George and I talk about marriage but we haven't set the date."

A month later they were wed in Santa Monica.

"Blabbermouth," said George. "I didn't say anything," countered Trish.

It was George's first day of shooting on the huge oil-field location outside of Stockton and Trish was on the set visiting.

She doesn't intend to pull an Elizabeth Taylor and show up every day and watch her husband.

GEORGE C. SCOTT
. . . fiance blabs

"I may come out when they shoot at night because I don't like to stay alone, but that's it," she said.

George, affable and charming, said he had no intention of playing Gen. Douglas MacArthur for Frank McCarthy as had been rumored. It was McCarthy who produced George's famous Oscar performance of Patton.

"When I heard Frank was going to do MacArthur, I thought of only one actor for the part — Cary Grant," said George.

"He has the aristocratic manner of MacArthur and would be perfect."

When Cary reads this, he may decide to give up his retirement. He has tremendous respect for Scott professionolly. It is an interesting casting and could well be one that might earn Cary the Oscar that he has long deserved.

Kramer originally had wanted to shoot the movie in Oklahoma, but the oil fields down there don't look like they did back in 1913, the period of the story.

"We surveyed the state — and Texas too — but all we found were steel rigs and high power lines."

The Stockton location is fantastic. Some 18 wooden rigs dot the rolling landscape in the middle of a 5,000-acre cattle ranch.

Some unplanned excitement took place during the shooting and the acting profession came close to losing two of its greatest practitioners — Scott and Mills.

The scene called for them to pull up to Faye's wildcat oil well in a wagon pulled by a team of horses. Even though Johnny plays Faye's long-lost father in the movie, she started picking them off with a rifle.

Special effects men had set up exploding caps which didn't bother the horses too much, but Kramer with a Colt .45 provided the piece de resistance.

The horses bolted and ran away. George, who hates horses anyhow, got himself clear in a hurry. Johnny, who is more used to playing straight-lipped British army officers, got knocked on his derriere. Nothing serious.

But as the horses took off wildly through the field with a wrangler fighting them on horseback, Scott kept mumbling:

MOVIES

Tuesday

You For Me (xx), on 4 at 9:30. A 1952 hospital comedy starring Jane Greer, Peter Lawford and Gig Young.

Back to God's Country (xx), on 12 at noon. Rock Hudson and Marcia Henderson star in this 1953 movie version of the James Oliver Curwood tale about a sea captain and his wife vs. the rigors of the North.

Footsteps in the Fog (xxx), on 6 and 8 at 12:45. An English-made mystery about a man who has poisoned his wife and then is blackmailed by his maid. Good cast with Stewart Granger and Jean Simmons.

A Place in the Sun (xxxx),on 5 at 4. (Part 1) A beautifully filmed story of a factory worker who falls in love with a beautiful and wealthy woman — while trapped in an affair with a girl of his own class. Fine performances by Elizabeth Taylor, Montgomery Clift and Shelley Winters highlight this 1951 movie. (Conclusion tomorrow, same time and channel.)

Escape (xx), on 12 at 7. A 1971 TV movie about an escape artist who's hired to rescue a kidnapped biologist. This drama, starring Christopher George, William Windom and Marlyn Mason, served as the pilot for the series The Immortal.

Ritual of Evil (xx), on 13 at 7:30. Louis Jordan, Anne Baxter, and Wilfrid Hyde-White star in this tale of mystery and the supernatural.

Short Walk to Daylight (xx), on 4 at 8:30. This 1972 TV movie goes below ground, into the New York City subway system, where eight earthquake survivors struggle for a way to reach the surface.

Torch Song (xx), on 7 and 12 at 11:30. Joan Crawford stars as a Broadway musical-comedy star who falls in love with a blind composer in this 1953 drama co-starring Michael Wilding.

Slaves (xx), on 2 at 11:50. Dianne Warwick and Ossie Davis star in this 1969 drama that describes the plight of blacks under a sadistic plantation owner in the early south.

The Fool Killer (xx), on 6 and 8 at midnight. A suspenseful account of a Civil War amnesia victim and a 12-year-old orphan who travel across rural America trying to solve a mysterious murder. Cast includes Anthony Perkins, Dana Elcar and Henry Hull.

Corvette K-255 (xx), on 13 at 12:30. Randolph Scott and Robert Mitchum star in this 1943 drama about a British corvette menaced by an enemy from the sea and the air.

Double Indemnity (xxxx), on 12 at 1:35. The crime of deliberate murder receives a microscopic examination in this tense, exciting and well-acted adaptation of the James Cain novel. Cast includes Fred MacMurray and Barbara Stanwyck.

Jan-Michael Vincent

Young Actor Takes Stardom in Stride

By RICHARD K. SHULL

HOLLYWOOD — Every once in a rare while, some individual will come along who makes the whole game of life sound so simple, he leaves you wondering what the rat race is all about.

And in the case of Jan-Michael Vincent, he's doing his thing naturally in Hollywood — home of the world's greatest concentration of plastic people and mass unreality.

At age 27, Vincent is a movie star who'd rather surf. He's hauling in money at a sinful rate yet he and his wife, Bonnie, still live in a little frame bungalow in Topanga Canyon near the Pacific Ocean where they have lived for five years.

At a time when unemployment is the norm in Hollywood, Vincent is so busy he fears the work may undermine his personal values.

"Sometimes I think it's all a fluke. Everything has happened so well, I worry if this is a fluke. Is this a temptation to put me off my guard?" Vincent asked rhetorically.

At the moment, he has just finished the starring title role in The World's Greatest Athlete for Disney Studios (a synonym for money machine) and the starring role in a CBS movie-for-TV, Sandcastles.

He also was the star of one of last year's most popular TV films, Tribes, on ABC and has developed a large cult of young followers even for his work in films whose titles aren't worth repeating.

Life has been easy for him. He was born in Denver and reared on a farm in central California with a younger brother and sister.

He dropped out of junior college when he found classes were interfering with his primary interest — surfing. He followed the big waves all the way to San Blas on the West Coast of Mexico where he survived by aiding the Indian fishermen haul in their nets in return for food.

After a six-month hitch in the Army (not by his choice) he went to Hollywood with a vague notion of earning money making TV Commercials. Agent Dick Clayton suggested he instead try acting and took him to Universal Studio in hope of getting him a contract in which he could earn a little money while learning

"While I was waiting to see Monique James, the talent coordinator, another girl in the office said I ought to see Bob Conrad; that he was casting a movie he was going to make in Mexico," Vincent recalled.

"I left there right away without keeping the appointment and saw Conrad. I got the film part with him."

That's the way it has been with Vincent ever since. He's appeared in a half-dozen movies, including one with John Wayne, and had repeated roles in 10 different TV series.

"I've been working so much in the past year, I'm afraid I think more about work than life. That's bad, when you forget about your own life in the press of work," he said.

"Don't get me wrong. I don't complain about it. I could be on the LAPD, working the same hours for a lot less money. But today, everyone is fighting for their identity. And other people around absorb a lot of your energies. I know things have changed a lot for me in the last year," he said.

Has he ever considered what it might have been like to be a star in the old days? When the studio dictated an actor's life style, personality, choice of friends and even mates? When actors were merchandised like hamburger?

"It might have been easier," he said adding he is too young to know about those times. "As it is, I'm saddled with it all. There's no one to guide or advise me."

For the future, Vincent said he has purchased a chunk of ground on the sea near Santa Barbara where the surfing is good and the air is clean. But moving there is somewhere off in his nebulous future.

More pressing to him now is the desire for children.

"I'm 27 now. It's getting time to have children. My wife and I have been talking about it. Until now, it has been 'pushing' time on my work. Getting established as an actor is chaotic, no time for children. There has to be some organization and order to your life to rear kids right," he said.

So far he's been lucky in the clash between his work and his natural yen for simple outdoor living. Most of the films he has made have been filmed on locations, away from Hollywood.

ELECTRONICS KEEP FANS IN KNOW

NEW YORK (UPI) — Sophisticated computers which represent the latest advancements in electronics are increasingly providing an additional dimension to the world of spectator sports.

From baseball to the Munich Olympics to the Indianpolis 500, electronic scoreboards are giving the fans in the stands the latest facts and figures on what's happening on the field the instant it takes place.

As recently as two decades ago, fans in many major league baseball parks were kept informed of the field action by antiquated wooden scoreboards manned by a score of men who scurried behind the scenes manually changing the flaps to indicate balls, strikes, runs scored, and little else.

If a baseball buff wanted to know why a batter was carried off the field in apparently agonizing pain, he had to wait for the next day's newspapers.

During the 1950s, fans resorted to carrying newly introduced transistor radios so that they could round out their enjoyment of the game by listening to the play-by-play announcer.

Today he can sit comfortably in the stands munching his hot dog and drinking his beer and depend on modern electronics and the virtually total information scoreboard that is found in most baseball stadiums.

One of the first of these boards was installed in 1968 at the new home of the Oakland Athletics baseball team by Conrac Corp., a Manhattan-based electronics firm.

Conrac's president, Donald H. Putnam, is proudest of the $1.7 million display scoreboards that the firm installed for the summer Olympics.

Putnam said that the Munich spectators were the best and fastest-informed in the history of the games.

He said the three computerized scoreboards provided results and other information 220 times faster than was possible at the 1968 Olympics in Mexico City.

Boone Back for New TV Series

By JERRY BUCK

HOLLYWOOD — After a seven-year absence, Richard Boone is back on television, as uncompromising as ever in his judgment of the studios, the networks, the ratings and the frustrations of making a western on a backlot.

"I don't even like being here," said Boone, who has now taken up residence in St. Augustine, Fla., after seven years in Hawaii. "There are so many nice places in the world."

Boone sat in his dressing room-office at Universal Studios. His dark brown hair was almost to his shoulders and his grey mustache almost to his chin for his role in Hec Ramsey on NBC's Sunday Mystery Movie.

"If we go beyond the current commitment, whatever is made after that will be made away from the studio entirely," he said. Boone is committed to four 90-minute shows and the two-hour movie that kicked the series off Sunday, Oct. 8.

First on his schedule after Hec Ramsey, however, is an American western to be filmed entirely in Israel. It will be his eighty trip to Israel, where he previously made the movie Madron.

RICHARD BOONE
. . . Palladin to Hec

Boone has always preferred location shooting.

"The backlot is an indescribable mess," he said. "Visually, it looks fine.

"But creatively, you can't work there. You're playing a scene and a pink-and-white bus drives up 15 feet away and an idiot on a loudspeaker says, 'There they are ladies and gentlemen, acting just for you.' And you're trying to concentrate on a scene."

Boone said if the show is successful future episodes would be made in Tucson or Santa Fe.

That success, of course, depends on the ratings — a subject that brings Boone to the boiling point. He said his first series, Medic, was put on "for just one reason — to knock Lucille Ball off top notch." It failed to do so and NBC cancelled it after two years.

His next series, Have Gun, Will Travel, rode high in the ratings and Boone left it a millionaire in 1963 to put together a repertory company for anthologies on The Richard Boone Show on NBC. It was cancelled after the first year.

He said: "I was bitter about it then and I still am. It was a rotten decision. The show was just beginning to catch on."

In Hec Ramsey Boone plays gunfighter who went off to London and Paris to learn scientific crime-fighting. He returns around 1900 as a deputy chief of police in a midwestern town.

Fonda Sr. Approves Lifestyle of Family

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD — Henry Fonda put to rest the angry rumor that he disapproves of daughter Jane's behavior or the life-style of son Peter.

To the contrary. He is proud of them both. He loves them.

At the same time it never occurred to Henry that he would be the founding father of what may eventually become an acting family dynasty.

"I'm proud of both their accomplishments," said Henry, beaming himself during a long lunch break at Goldwyn studios. "I was tickled to death when Jane won the oscar this year. She deserved it.

"She was concerned that publicities might keep her from winning. But I told her to forget it. She was clearly the best actress in the running. Peter is very excited about his own new production, Idaho Transfer. So am I.

"I new Jane was a good

actress before she committed herself to acting. She did two plays with me — on Cape Cod and in Omaha. Her first movie, Tall Story, was nothing you'd put in a time capsule. But she kept improving, surviving more bad films than most actresses do in a lifetime."

Fonda doesn't look his 67 years. There is a Cary Cooper-like charm and self-consciousness about him.

He is generally given to understatement, rare in an actor. He is ill at ease when discussing himself. But he will when pushed.

"I didn't want to be an actor," he said. "I was painfully aware of being well, shy isn't quite the word. Maybe introverted. Still am. I hate to go to big parties. I have no small talk

"My acting probably reflects this. I perform as naturally as I can. I won't call it underplaying. I'm careful not to overplay. If I ever made a rule for myself it is: 'Don't ever let them catch you acting.'

"Dorothy Brando — Marlon's mother — pushed me into acting in Omaha. They cast me as a juvenile in a local play when I dropped out of the University of Minnesota where I was studying journalism.

"I didn't know what I was getting into. But acting became therapy for me. I'm not self-conscious when I'm playing a character. I can walk on stage before an audience of 8,000 — and I have — and not be up tight. But I'm terrified about being myself and entering a room with eight strangers.

"As long as I can play someone else I feel confident."

Fonda brushed aside the possibility of doing a movie with his offspring. He said it would only be a gimmick.

He demarks private life and his profession. His need for family relationships was revealed in his hopes for a family Christmas.

Both Jane and Peter are separated from their spouses. Henry's grandchildren are not always with their parents.

"I hope to come back to Hollywood in time for the holidays and spend Christmas with the whole family," Fonda said wistfully. "But that may not be possible. If so, I'll spend the day with my cousin Douw and his family. Douw is an old Dutch name, just as Fonda is an old Italian name."

Fonda is starring in the television movie, The Red Pony. He believes it is the best John Steinbeck work he has done. But he was near perfect in 1939 as Tom Joad in Steinbeck's The Grapes of Wrath.

Everything You've Always Wanted to Know, Etc.

Dr. David Reuben

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD — Dr. David Reuben, author of Everything You've Always Wanted to Know About Sex But Were Afraid To Ask, said loudly and clearly he didn't like Woody Allen's version of his book.

"I didn't enjoy the movie," said the psychiatrist, "because it impressed me as a sexual tragedy.

"Every episode in the picture was a chronicle of sexual failure which was the converse of everything in my book. Everybody in the movie was a sexual flop."

The book, which sold some 11 million copies, had as much story line as the Pismo Beach telephone directory. The cast, however, was infinitely more sex oriented — otherwise Pismo Beach would boast a larger population.

"There is no way to profit from sneering at sex problems" the good doctor continued. "My book was written to help people.

"I had nothing to do with the script or the picture. All I did was sell them 13 words — the title."

Dr. Reuben is a youngish looking man, with large liquid eyes behind sedate spectacles. He tries not to behave as a doctor - author (that is, sedately) and is about half successful at it.

"The book was originally sold to Paramount and Elliott Gould," he said. "They sold the rights to United Artists and Woody Allen without my approval. Not that it would have made much difference."

Unlike Masters and Johnson, whose sex research is more clinical and vividly physical, Dr. Reuben appears to be more concerned with the psychological aspects of sex and its social manifestations.

He has written a new book, Any Woman Can! This time is dedicated to the proposition that almost all women can find sexual happiness and love within or without the confines of marriage.

Probably most women knew this for openers. Any Woman Can! hasn't sold as well as Everything You've Always Wanted, etc.

But the new book comes out in paperback this month and in all likelihood will be sold to the movies.

Inasmuch as the title is 10 words shorter than Reuben's first book, one wonders if he will receive as much money for the sale.

"The farthest thing from my mind was the sale of my first book to movies," Dr. Reuben said. "nor did I write this book with a film in mind.

"It was inconceivable for me to see it as a picture except as a documentary. But I don't think we're ready for that. However, I think my new book has more potential for a film than the first one."

As a specialist in sexual problems, Dr. Reuben was asked if the current mania about sex in this country had about run its course.

"No," he said. "I think America's preoccupation with sex is a compulsion for adult sex education. It's more than titilation because the power of stimulation is limited."

And that, said Dr. Reuben, is a fact.

CBC RADIO SERIES

Kaleidoscope, the audio-magazine designed to show new, meaningful relationships in this world of fragmented information — events, knowledge, creativity, ideas — returns for a new season Wednesdays and Thursdays at 2:03 p.m. on CBC Radio, starting October 25 and 26.

The series, part of the Ontario Educational Radio Broadcasts, will begin with a two-part documentary program which highlights The Newtonbrook Conference on Canadian Studies, a week-long nationwide conference with student representatives.

At the conference leading adovcates and opponents of Canadian Nationalism and economic independence discuss economics, civil rights, resources management, the role of youth, cultural nationalism and Canadian identity.

During the following weeks, up until Christmas holidays, Kaleidoscope will feature a wide variety of programs and subjects of interest not only to students but also to those listening at home.

Of special interest will be Touchstone On Northern Ontario, a nine-part series of programs designed to capture the spirit of the people of Northern Ontario who carve their lives out of the vast, begutiful and often hostile, environment. Host for this series will be Tom Kelly of CBC television's Singalong Jubilee.

For the sportsminded listeners there will be a four-part series entitled Willson On Sports, a behind-the-scenes look at our athletes and the recent Olympics. Bob Willson, CBC Radio sports commentator, attempts to discover the joys and problems of our athletes under strong competitive pressure in a strange environment.

MOVIES

Thursday

Sweet Rosie O'Grady (xxx), on 4 at 9:30. Betty Grable shows the legs she was famous for in this 1943 musical co-starring Robert Young.

Dragonwyck (xx), on 6 and 8 at 12:45. Gene Tierney, Walter Houston and Vincent Price star in this horror melodrama set about 1850 in a gloomy mysterious mansion.

The House That Wouldn't Die (xx), on 5 at 4. Barbara Stanwyck and Richard Egan star in this 1970 thriller about a woman who inherits an old house said to be haunted.

The Sunshine Patriot (xxx), on 7 at 4. An especially good made-for-TV spy drama starring Cliff Robertson, Dina Merrill and Wilfrid Hyde-White.

Marriage: Year One (xx), on 13 at 7:30. Sally Field and Robert Pratt play newlyweds in this TV drama about a clash of values. The bride is determined to preserve her identity as a social activist and the groom insists a woman's place is in the home.

Guess Who's Coming to Dinner? (xxxx), on 7 at 9. Katherine Hepburn and Spencer Tracy (teamed for the ninth and last time) play an affluent middle-aged couple whose liberal views are put to the test. Their daughter has returned from a holiday with the man she plans to marry — a black doctor. Sidney Poitier and Katherine Houghton play the lovers.

Will Penny (xxx), on 12 at 9. A memorable, quiet western is this 1968 movie starring Charlton Heston as a range-weary saddle-tramp in the autumn of a lonely life — a life that's about to be changed. Excellent supporting cast with Joan Hackett and Donald Pleasance.

The Helen Morgan Story (xx), on 7 and 12 at 11:30. A highly fictionalized account of the famed blues singer who was popular during the twenties and thirties. Starring in this 1957 drama are Ann Blyth and Paul Newman.

Against the Wind (xx), on 2 at 11:50. English-made Second World War drama about British espionage agents on a dangerous mission in German-occupied Belgium.

Sabina (xx), on 6 and 8 at midnight. Humphrey Bogart, William Holden and Audrey Hepburn star in this mild comedy about a playboy who falls in love with his chauffeurs's daughter.

Sword in the Desert (xx), on 13 at 12:30. This 1949 drama tells the story of the struggle to establish Palestine as a homeland for Jews. Cast includes Dana Andrews and Marta Toren.

PAUL ANKA, Canadian singer-composer, is profiled on CBC-TV's Telescope on Thursday, October 26 at 9 p.m. on Channel 2. Anka reminisces about his 15 years in show business, recalling his rise to fame from his home town in Ottawa to a hectic life as a teen idol.

YOU'RE ELECTED CHARLIE BROWN! Into each election a few disappointments must fall. And this all-important political contest for the office of school president is no exception. Hurled into the race by his sister Sally, Charlie Brown finds himself facing some tough opposition . . . the blanket-toting intellectual Linus and his campaign manager, Lucy Van Pelt. Snoopy serves as director and engineer for a radio call-in show. On Thursday, October 26, at 7:30 p.m., Channel 8 presents this timely special—an animated look at the world with the Peanuts characters.

POPULAR PROGRAM BACK ON CBC-TV

CBC-TV's This Land returns to the air Thursday October 26 at 10:30 p.m. with a trip across the country as seen through the eyes of an old man, who comments on the changes — good and bad — that have taken place in his lifetime. (N.B. this is the only occasion in the season when This Land will be telecast on a Thursday. The following week, on Nov. 1st it returns to its usual Wednesday night at 8 position.)

From the Maritimes to British Columbia there have been many changes over half a century or so, especially in the way people live. But there are also, as the old man notes, many unchanging aspects of the land. In Nova Scotia fishermen still fish the way of their fathers, and there are some boat-builders still making dories the old way, following a long and proud tradition.

The changes most readily apparent are the pace of life and the mode of living — where the horse once leisurely trod now the motorcycle roars, and people who lived together without benefit of clergy were thought to be "living in sin." Now, it's becoming more and more accepted. Out West you'll still find cowboys and chuck-wagons, but the cities are getting bigger and more frantic.

At the end of his journey the old man finds that maybe "we're moving too fast, and in the wrong directions".

This edition of This Land also includes a tribute to the man who hosted the series for the past two years, naturalist John Hopkins who died of a heart attack on August 6 this year.

A Look At This Land was written and directed by Jack Kellum and narrated by Lyal Brown. It was filmed by Horst Ericht and edited by Bill Hunt. The songs were composed and sung by Paul Hann and Peter White of Edmonton.

Bit parts: CBS has picked up the Here's Lucy show, marking the 23rd year Lucille Ball will star in her own series . . . Robert Reed, who plays the father on The Brady Bunch, will direct an episode of the series this year . . . . Arthur O'Connell signed to star in a segment of Ghost Story.

DR. ANNA BIDDER, biology professor at the University of Cambridge, England, CAPTAIN JACQUES COUSTEAU and PHILIPPE COUSTEAU inspect the nautilus, a living fossil, held captive in Dr. Bidder's research aquarium. The Undersea World of Jacques Cousteau: 500 Million Years Beneath The Sea to be telecast on Thursday, October 26 at 10 p.m. on Channel 8.

OFF THE RECORD ON CBC-AM RADIO

Bob Kerr, a veteran CBC radio record show commentator, is now on the CBC-AM network Mondays through Fridays at 3:03 p.m. EDT with Bob Kerr's Off the Record. It's an entertaining hour of light classics, chosen by Kerr mostly from his own vast record collection, interspersed with his comments on the music and performers.

And those comments have been a debatable matter by some listeners who say he talks too much. But Kerr doesn't agree; he feels that his chatter helps stimulate interest in the classics from listeners unfamiliar with the music.

Reviewers also seem to be for them shines through . . . has and almost encyclopedic knowledge of composers and performers, and an enviable knack of talking informally about pieces so that his love for trem shines through . . . thinkable without Bob Kerr's unrehearsed verbal impromptus, his puckish humor, and his frequent needling of record manufacturers for their sins of omission." (Vancouver Province).

Although Kerr likes many types of music, his interest in serious music has been nutured since the age of seven, when he began piano lessons. He's also experimented with the pipe organ and zither, but his forte is his ability to talk about the music, relating as an enthusiastic amateur to a musically untrained audience.

Bob Kerr has been hosting music programs since 1948, beginning at radio station CFCN in Calgary. He joined the CBC radio network in Vancouver in 1959, and has been a familiar voice on such programs as The Record Shelf, Music Before 1700, and Words About Music. He's done Off the Record for many years, as a local CBC Vancouver radio show and the program has been on the CBC-FM network since April (weekdays at 11:03 a.m.).

A future CBS special will be the Broadway musical "Applause," with Lauren Bacall starring, as she did in New York and on national tour. Plans call for the show to be taped in London when she appears in it there.

CBC Consumer Program Positive Step Forward

By CAROL BRADY
Times Staff

We've now had a look at the first two programs in CBC-TV's new weekly series, The Marketplace, the first Canadian-produced television show dealing with consumer problems.

Seen each Thursday evening on Channel 2 at 10 p.m., The Marketplace is hosted by newscaster George Finstad and consumer affairs specialist Joan Watson.

The program falls short in some areas but the over-all approach is definitely positive.

Marketplace opened with a quick look at rising food prices. This problem could well have filled the entire half-hour but was only touched on lightly.

Facts and figures on the profits of food processors and retailers and the reasons advanced by the food industry for rising costs were put forward.

How the consumer can stretch the dollar might have been more to the point in view of the dramatic price increases over the past year.

A look at the pitfalls of buying from door-to-door salesmen and an examination of magazine subscription soliciting came next and viewers were told about the Canadian consumer protection law that says a contract can be rescinded if action is taken within five days — a useful piece of information.

Midway through the first program Marshall Efron as Mr. Typical Consumer, launched into a tirade reminding the consumer of things he should be thankful for.

The second program in the series was better.

School buses filled with dummies collided. Body construction, seating, brakes and steering were checked for stress and faults.

Drivers of U.S. school buses were interviewed for their opinions on the handling and reliability of their vehicles. All agreed that higher saftey standards should be imposed.

Viewers were told that there are over 30,000 school bus accidents every year in the United States.

Reference was made to the Canadian Safety Standards Association and its proposals that Canadian school buses should conform to a more rigid safety code than presently exists.

"We don't need imported heroes," said George Finstad. Yet the most informative piece of reporting came from the United States.

Marshall Efron was on hand again, this time in Roman costume and quoting ancient proverbs.

He did, however, make a good point when he advised the consumer to check the pricing of battery-run toys.

Some prices include the cost of the batteries, but most do not. Add that cost to the price of the toy and the tax, and the sum is often more than the consumer bargained for.

Hazardous products, auto safety, chemical additives in food, planned obsolescence, mass product duplication, modern meat processing methods and misleading advertising are among future topics of consumer concern to be scrutinized on The Marketplace.

If you have a consumer problem, you can write to The Marketplace, c-o, CBC-TV, Box 500, Terminal A, Toronto, Ontario.

PETERSON GOES BACK TO LAW

Former Attorney-General Leslie Peterson announced today he is rejoining his old Vancouver law firm, but left his options open concerning any provincial byelections or his future leadership of the Social Credit party.

Peterson said he is going back to the firm of Boughton, Street, Collins, Dunfee, Craig and Mortimer where he will be a senior partner. He was with the firm before he entered politics in 1956.

Peterson said it is "necessary to earn a living" but said he will not make a firm decision on running in a provincial byelection until a seat becomes vacant.

He said he is "honored" by the invitiation from former premier Bennett that Peterson run in Bennett's South Okanagan riding and become the next Socred leader.

"But the fact is that there is no seat available," Peterson said. "When a seat does become available, I will be prepared to answer the question at that time."

'Skin-Saving' Socreds Back NDP

By BRIAN BUTTERS and CLEMENT CHAPPLE
Times Staff

The NDP government got unexpected support from the Social Credit party Thursday when the legislature adopted the speech from the throne.

In what Premier Barrett termed an exercise in "political skin-saving," the 10 Socreds rose with the NDP when the vote was taken. The Liberals and Progressive Conservatives opposed the motion.

Opposition Leader W. A. C. Bennett had a different reason for the Socreds' support — he called it an example of "co-operation and goodwill" by his party.

The debate on the speech from the throne took a total of seven hours, with speakers from all four parties participating.

It included defeat of a non-confidence motion from the Socreds, which expressed regret that the speech did not contain legislation for producing jobs, for encouraging secondary industry and for the promotion of B.C. agricultural products.

The vote on the amendment resulted in the combined opposition parties voting against the government.

The two-day debate was highlighted by criticisms from both sides of the house of the arguments put forward, particularly with respect to statements made by Premier Barrett about the government's intended takeover of B.C. Tel and two gas transmission companies.

Industrial Development Minister Alex Macdonald said during the debate Thursday that B.C. should perhaps have an "economic advisory council" to help create economic policies for the province.

Macdonald said the idea is not government policy but the government wants a discussion of the whole problem of industry and employment and must come up with some new "appraisal procedure."

Macdonald said he believes it is important not to rush into industry aid programs without research and planning.

"We want to know the kinds of industry that should be helped," Macdonald said.

Phyllis Young (NDP — Vancouver Little Mountain) told the legislature the time has come for a major study to be made of the significance of jobs.

In her first address to the house, Ms. Young said a job should not necessarily have to produce a profit for someone, that it should instead be designed to create some social gain.

With an expanding labor force and a diminishing job market, she said, the time must be taken to find out what role jobs are to play in the future of the province.

In response to criticism from the opposition parties that the government had included nothing in the throne speech dealing with jobs, Ms. Young said there has not been time in the 35 days since the government took office to create a blueprint for jobs.

Allan Williams (L — West Vancouver-Howe Sound) called for the government to establish a legislative committee to meet representatives of labor and business to discuss the future of the province in terms of what is necessary to keep it moving.

Williams said the place to

Striker Welfare On Way

Rehabilitation Minister Norman Levi said Thursday the NDP government will introduce legislation next spring that would allow for welfare payments to striking and locked-out workers.

Levi made the statement in the legislative corridors when commenting on a Supreme Court of Canada ruling that such workers are not entitled to payments under B.C.'s present legislation.

Levi said that the government is committed to providing welfare when there is need, and the fact that workers are locked out or striking should not affect the definition of need.

The court ruling came in the case of Ross Alden, a Vancouver insulation mechanic whose lawyer was former NDP leader Tom Berger, now a B.C. Supreme Court judge.

The former government took the attitude that strikers should not get payments, Levi noted.

But the NDP believes that "if people are in need we want to help them."

"At that time (the Alden case) our party took the position that the government could in fact give support to strikers and locked-out workers," Levi told reporters.

"Now that a ruling has been brought down by the courts it's obvious that we'll have to look at changing the legislation."

War to Death In Ulster, Craig Vows

Times News Services

"We are going to war in Ulster," a hardline Protestant leader said Thursday in London, and 1,000 more people will die in the embattled province between now and Christmas, he added.

William Craig, a former cabinet minister in Ulster's suspended government said he and his supporters were willing "to fight to the death" to preserve Ulster's British heritage.

"The future of Ulster will be decided by bullets — not ballots," he told a Conservative Club meeting.

"We are set on a course of civil war so horrible that you and I can hardly understand it," he told his stunned audience.

Craig added that "without boasting I can mobilize tomorrow 80,000 men who will not see any compromise in Ulster."

One other leader of the movement described the speech as "the language of lunacy."

Meanwhile, Reuters news agency said there was a report, which sources close to the British army said probably was true, that Protestants of the UDA indulged in collusion with members of the IRA, which draws its support from the Roman Catholic community. The UDA denied the report.

Reuters quoted reliable sources as saying that UDA leaders and representatives of the Official wing of the IRA arranged a meeting in a Belfast hotel last Sunday.

But the meeting — at which both sides were said to have reached agreement on the necessity to end middle class domination of politics in Ulster — was also reported to have been infiltrated by the more militant provisional wing of the IRA.

The Provisionals are actively fighting British forces but the officials still are respecting a truce reached last summer.

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Most restaurant prices in Victoria and Vancouver will go up 10 per cent next week on the day the provincial government raises the minimum wage to $2 per hour.

When the minimum wage goes to $2.25 per hour on Jan. 1, 1974, menu prices will likely go up an additional 5 per cent, plus another 5 per cent when it goes to $2.50 per hour in June, 1974.

Gordon Schoor, president of the Victoria and Southern Vancouver Island branch of the Canadian Restaurant Association, said today restaurants were faced with a choice of raising prices or cutting staff.

He said the decision to raise menu rates was taken at a meeting in Vancouver of mainland and Vancouver Island restaurant officials.

Marcos Planning Power for Life

By LEE LESCAZE
Washington Post

HONG KONG — President Ferdinand Marcos will have the legal authority to rule the Philippines as long as he chooses and there never need be future national elections, according to a key article of the nation's new draft constitution, the Washington Post learned Thursday.

The article also specifically gives constitutional approval to all Marcos' decrees issued in the almost four weeks since he imposed martial law throughout the Phillipines.

The martial law administration has made no public announcement about the article, which appears to observers to be the ultimate result of Marcos' many months of work to get a new constitution to his liking drafted by the constitutional convention.

Before martial law, the convention was moving very slowly toward completing its work, and there was widespread speculation that it was under pressure from the president to extend all present terms of office until 1975.

It appears that convention work has been greatly speeded since martial law was imposed and the new "transitory provisions article" would extend all terms indefinitely. The article was passed by a convention committee Tuesday and will be submitted to the full convention next week, according to well-informed sources.

Ballard Jailed

TORONTO (CP) — Harold Edwin Ballard, president of Maple Leaf Gardens and a governor of the National Hockey League, was sentenced today to three years in Kinsgston penitentiary.

Ballard, 69, was sentenced to three years on each of two counts — one of theft and one of fraud — involving 47 individual charges.

The president of the Toronto Maple Leaf hockey club will serve a total of three years since the sentences run concurrently.

Lewis Predicts NDP Gains

Times News Services

Lewis "has struck a note that others have been forced to respond to," said T. C. Douglas, former NDP leader and candidate for re-election in Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands, when he welcomed Lewis to Nanaimo.

"We are doing very well across the country," Lewis said, predicting many more New Democrats will be elected to the Commons in the Oct. 30 general election. The NDP had 25 MPs at dissolution.

Today Lewis continued his tour of B.C. making stops at Port Alberni and Vancouver.

At Rimouski, Que., Real Caouette, federal Social Credit leader, was challenged by a heckler who said separation from Canada is the only route for Quebec to follow.

"Everybody knows Quebec is not a province like the others just as Alberta is different from Nova Scotia and Ontario is different from Newfoundland," Caouette said.

"We must give the provinces the liberty to act within Canada, while providing them with the means to do so."

The whole wrangle over bilingualism could be resolved if the federal government made sufficient subsidies available to the provinces so that both languages could be taught from Grade 1, he added.

One journalist with the Stanfield party, Wang Chang-Yun of the New China News Agency, was not permitted to make the journey from Charlottetown.

Conservative party officials said Wang, who represents the official mainland Chinese news agency, was refused entry by U.S. immigration officials.

Meanwhile, Prime Minister Trudeau has told his former cabinet colleague Eric Kierans that he should continue to work within the Liberal party to seek to persuade more Liberals to accept the Kierans' point of view.

"But I hope that you will not take a lack of agreement with your point of view on a given issue as an indication of any less concern for the integrity of Canada than that which you yourself possess," said the prime minister in a letter released Thursday.

He released the text of his reply to a letter he received last week from Kierans.

Your Federal Candidates

HANSEN
Victoria

By ROGER STONEBANKS
Times Staff

The New Democratic Party has never won Victoria federal constituency.

But that isn't daunting 25-year-old Flemming Hansen, the Danish-born University of Victoria economics and political science student now working full-time on the campaign.

He points to steadily increasing party support over the last decade which reached 9,414 votes in the 1968 election, or 20 per cent of the total constituency votes cast.

He describes the improvement as "from hopeless to at least a respectable third" and the party's 1968 showing was "despite Trudeaumania."

Sitting beneath a poster headed Relevant Socialism, with photographs of former NDP-CCF leaders J. S. Woodsworth, M. J. Coldwell and T. C. Douglas, he adds: "If that trend continues . . ."

To Hansen, sincere, quick-spoken and brimming with enthusiasm, "it looks damn good. The question is: Is it enough to win. We have got to pick up 4,000 to 5,000 votes to win."

He predicts that David Groos, the Liberal who won in 1968 with 18,401 votes, will lose at least 5,000 to 6,000 votes.

"I think I've got a good chance of picking them up," he said.

Hansen predicts the Progressive Conservatives will remain "fairly stable;" making Groos the "man to beat." In the last election, the Tories polled 13,578 votes.

Hansen, however, doesn't emphasize his chances of success. It was his last commment, in response to a question,

LINDHOLM
Esquimalt-Saanich

The color co-ordinated anteroom of Pearlman and Lindholm, barristers and solicitors, has the rich texture of an Amazon rain forest. Wood and stone meld with yellow broadloom producing what can only be described as the opulence of the law.

Even the receptionist's dress is co-ordinated.

When the muted telephone gives forth with its gurgling birdsong one half expects to see a brilliant macaw fly out of the indirect lighting.

All this is the lair of Esquimalt-Saanich Liberal candidate Louis Lindholm — a senior partner in Vancouver Island's largest law firm — and a man who wants to go to Ottawa in the worst way.

"I've had a fair output out of this community so I feel it is my social, personal responsibility to put an input back into it," Lindholm said.

That's the kind of statement a good courtroom lawyer like the Liberal candidate could dissect in a few minutes of cross-examination. But political pablum or not, the candidate has had a fork in a number of local pies.

As president of the Victoria Bar Society, a six-year director of Kiwanis Village — "That's a million dollar complex which is giving shelter and comfort to the aged" — and president of the Saanich Peninsula Hospital Society, Lindholm has paid his community dues.

A cynic might add that such dues reap political recipts,

Hire More French—Report

By CLANDE LEMELIN

MONTREAL — Canadians who do not speak French would only get 15 per cent of the high-level government appointments during the next three years if Ottawa pursues its official goals on bilingualism.

This explosive conclusion highlights a secret treasury board report on language patterns in the so-called "mandarin class" that rules the public service.

The report states that bilingual percentage targets for 1975 announced last year by treasury board president C. M. Drury cannot possibly be met unless the government orders a complete reversal of the French-English ration in its recruiting.

"Despite all the directives on bilingualism and all the controversy since 1966, we have been unable to find any significant progress in the executive category of the public service," the document says.

The crash program is needed "urgently" to give French-Canadians more senior appointments and to promote four times fewer officials who speak English only over the next three years, the task force concludes.

Copies of this report and of several others drafted by treasury board officials during the past six months were obtained by the Montreal newspaper Le Devoir and the findings were made available to the Victoria Times.

Officials examined the implications of a statement of government policy that Drury made in the House of Commons March 9, 1971.

The minister announced that by 1975, at least 60 per cent and perhaps more of senior officials in the national capital region and in about 50 bilingual districts to be designated later will have to be bilingual.

For administrative and outside jobs, the target was set at 50 per cent; for secretaries and other support staff, 35 per cent; for professionals, scientists and technicians, 15 per cent.

In a report dated May 27, 1972, the task force stated that the "bilingual ratio" in the executive category stood at 32.6 per cent at the end of last year and that the figure

To a Bride of the Year —The One and Only Ev

Only a spineless reticence about speaking to any group numbering more than four and maybe the fact that I know too much about the participants has caused me to decline the invitation to propose the toast to the bride at what's sure to be The Wedding of The Year. My compromise is to be an usher at which, doubtless, I'll be as inept.

Nov. 11 is the date of the ceremony. It will be a remembrance day in more ways than one, bringing together, as it will, people whose paths have not crossed in 30 or 40 years.

The wedding will unite Miss Evelyn A. Caldwell, spinster, of Vancouver, better known to readers of the Vancouver Sun as the shopping-guide writer, "Penny Wise", and Mr. Gordon Root, of Victoria, widower, publisher of the Juan de Fuca News Review.

Back when the world was young, a full four decades ago, Evelyn and Gordon were among the unlikely, incredibly youthful company that put out the morning News-Herald in Vancouver ,a staff-owned newspaper long since gone belly-up. Its demise scattered all of us to the four winds of journalism. Now, as the result of this most unexpected of love stories, it will bring us back together.

As it is at every wedding the bride will be, as the saying goes, the cynosure of all eyes. There'll be an extra reason for it. at this particular wedding. The bride is, as it happens, the kookiest, funniest, zaniest and absolutely adorable woman in the entire world, a legend in her time, an Irish leprechaun whose courage, temper, heart and capacity for love are famed far and wide.

I know the temper. For a year or two I was Evelyn's city editor. Any well-meaning tampering with her copy was suicidal. She was, and doubtless is, deadly with a paste pot at anything up to 100 yards. Once, when I deleted a mere three words from her copy (the words, as I recall, were "By Evelyn Caldwell") I sought refuge in the men's room. To this day survivors will still own to a state of shock on watching Evelyn climb through the transom, paste-pot in hand, in pursuit of her cowering quarry.

I know the unpredictable, acting-on-impulse quality that is her way of life. Once, again as her city editor, I assigned her to a feature story on a new cargo-passenger Norwegian ship that had come into harbor. Five weeks later I was rewarded with a post card from Oslo. Evelyn was, she assured me, working on the story and wished I was there. The captain, it turned out, had invited her along for the passage home. What could be more natural than to accept?

She is a woman who has long believed that she can do anything and was doing it, as a woman, long before the notion of "liberation" came along.

They say that it nearly broke up the war when Evelyn hung her laundered lingerie outside her tent in Korea, but her front-line despatches from that particular conflict were the equal of any man's. On dozens of world-wide assignments she came through with highly personal, highly readable accounts of how it was.

She did, in fact, entirely remake herself. To call her "plain" in those years of so long ago was to understate the case. She looked like an un-made bed. She was one of the boys and dressed the part only too well. One day she just decided to change, just like that.

To our astonishment the baggy girl in the heavy oxfords became the chic and stylish woman of today. When she was teased once too often about her lath-like figure she went on a special diet which, it was rumored, required the daily consumption of two gallons of cream. Whatever it was the results were spectacular as they are to this day (Friday).

The new-look girl combined with the Irish joie de vivre that had been there all along and that has never flagged created a superior breed of woman and a superior breed of kook.

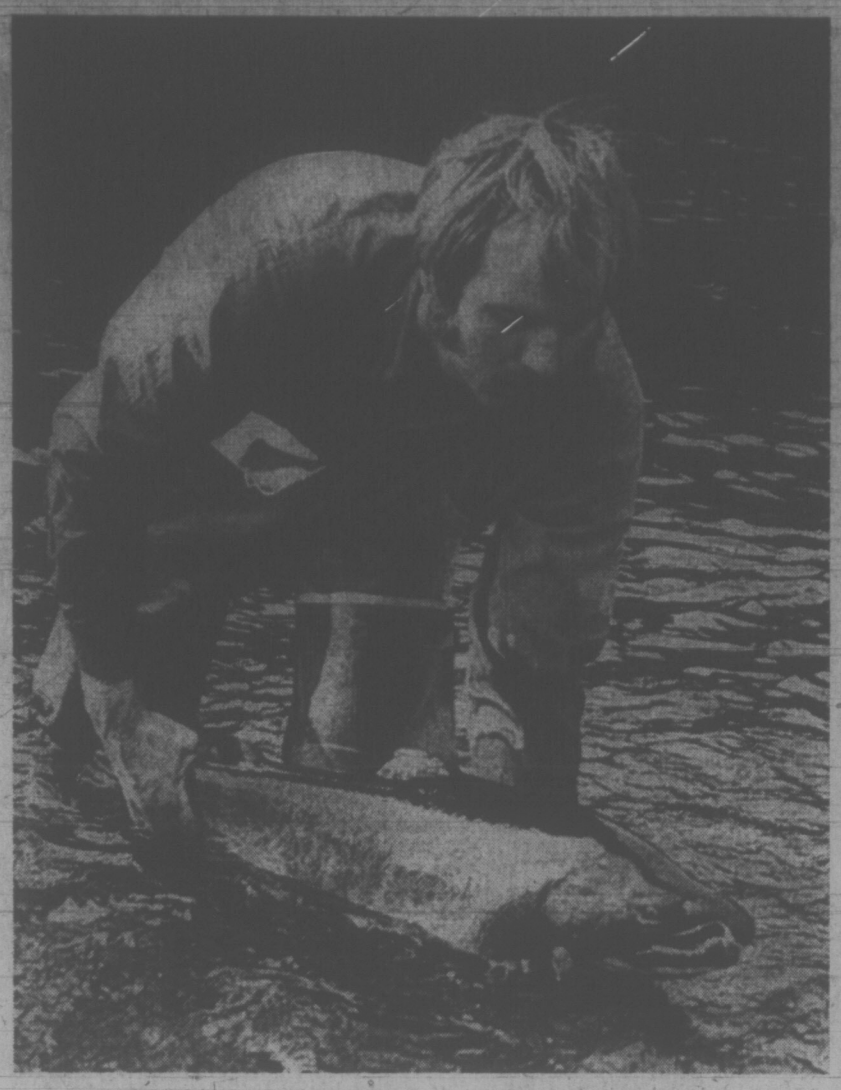
I know the depth of genuine sentimentality that lie beneath that effervescent facade.

Evelyn and I were once assigned as a team to cover a royal tour, a coast-to-coast safari by Elizabeth and Philip. Wherever they stopped, in the great cities and at whistle stops alike, there was the playing of the anthem. The Queen never batted an eye during these renditions, but time after time I saw that Evelyn's eyes brimmed with tears.

My curiosity demanded an explanation. "I keep hearing the words, 'God Bless Old Bill Caldwell!' the lady explained. And Bill, 91 years of age now, will be there when his daughter goes down the aisle next month.

As I say, dozens of us who haven't seen each other in many years, will be gathering in the church when Evelyn and Gordon exchange their vows. Already there's been a renewing of friendships severed long ago by the diverging paths we've taken.

There's a funny thing about these preliminary reunions. Each of us had feared that they'd make us feel older than we really are. Yet quite the opposite has been true. Such is the powder of that giddy, everlasting girl and the power of love.



Brian Smith releases Coho into Sooke river

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

It looked like a construction gang at work Thursday on Sooke River.

A skyline was slung across the river. Equipment moved along it and then lowered 300 feet to men waiting below.

Nets were used to trap the fish which were placed in milk cans and hauled to the road above. The coho were then transferred to a tank and trucked to spawning beds two miles up river.

Before being moved, the fish were immersed in a tranquillizing solution by Dr. David Groves, a biologist. This was to keep them from thrashing about in the tank and killing themselves.

Was the coho project worth all that trouble and labor?

"If you believe in miracles this is one which occurs in nature every year," said Al Meadows, vice-president of the society.

"These few fish will produce about 300,000 eggs," he said. "These in turn will provide the sea with countless thousands of coho salmon."

"Nature is a wonderful provider," he added. "If only we managed nature resoures properly."

The fish which were moved Thursday had been released in the river as fingerlings in 1968.

The society in 1968 decided to experiment releasing fingerlings upstream and helping the salmon to their spawning grounds years later.

Thursday's project was carried out by volunteers and the equipment donated by six firms. The project has the approval of the department of fisheries.

Meadows said some type of fish ladder could be built to help the fish up the river. Otherwise the fish would have to be trucked every fall to their spawning grounds.

"It should ensure that the Sooke River will always have a steady flow of water," he added. "At present other resources are not considered. In this day and age, this is a backward policy."

Meanwhile, federal fisheries officials announced the Sooke River and its tributaries will be closed to salmon fishing, angling or trolling, at 2 p.m. Saturday until further notice.

The move was ordered to protect the transplanted salmon.

NDP Leader to Speak In Oak Bay Saturday

Federal NDP leader David Lewis will be in Victoria Saturday as part of his three-day British Columbia campaign tour.

Lewis will arrive at the Empress Hotel at 12:30 p.m. on a chartered bus from Nanaimo with his wife and NDP stalwarts Grace MacInnis and Tommy Douglas.

From 2 to 3 p.m. Lewis will be on a CJVI open line show while his wife and Mrs. MacInnis open a tea and bazaar put on by the Grace MacInnis Club at the Sons of Norway Hall.

Local NDP candidates Flemming Hansen and Roger Smith will join the Lewis entourage for a public rally Saturday night at 8 at Oak Bay Junior High.

Lewis will leave early Sunday morning by ferry to Vancouver.

SLASH FIRES RULED OUT

Slash-burning on most of Vancouver Island has been banned by the B.C. Forest Service because of smoke pollution and unseasonably warm weather.

No open fires of any kind will be allowed along the east coast of Vancouver Island from Kelsey Bay south to Port Renfrew, including the Gold River and Port Alberni regions.

The ban, which went into effect midnight Thursday, was announced by Forest Protection Officer Don Owen.

High winds caused a number of slash fires in the Sooke, Cowichan Lake, Langford and Harrison Lake areas to burn out of control last weekend.

More than 380 men in the Sooke and Cowichan Lake districts are fighting forest fires which escaped from slash burning last weekend, a Vancouver Forest District official said.

Three of the fires are in the Sooke area and two in Cowichan.

He said the total number of acreage of forest lands involved has not yet been determined.

Meanwhile, the forest services branch announced Thursday that some forest companies may face charges because of the fires which got out of control.

Special Courtroom For Drug Charges

By BRUCE OBEE
Times Staff

The sudden influx of narcotics charges from last week's nation-wide drug crackdown will be dealt with in a specially reserved courtroom at the Victoria Law Courts building, 850 Burdett, lawyer Michael Hutchison said Thursday.

Hutchison, Crown prosecutor in most of the cases, said, "We will have a court in one of the unused courtrooms" in the building.

What is normally the small debts court has been reserved from Jan. 15 to 20 and Hutchison believes one trial each morning or afternoon, or two preliminary hearings per half day can be accommodated.

From a total of 27 warrants issued in Greater Victoria, 22 people have been charged in connection with the nation-wide sweep.

"It's been a week since it all began," said Hutchison. Some people haven't even elected trial method and already cases are being remanded into January.

The charges will still be read in the provincial criminal court at 633 Fisgard, but will be remanded, if an adjournment is necessary, to the reserved court.

Pre-sentence reports are often required before sentence is imposed and one week is normally required to obtain such a report.

Asked if persons convicted in the reserved court, who require a pre-sentence report, will be remanded for a week and sentenced in the criminal court on Fisgard, provincial court clerk Robert Davidson said he had no information.

Davidson said the reserved court will provide a tremendous relief for the criminal court.

The court will be staffed in the usual manner with a magistrate, court officers, a court clerk and a court reporter, he said.

Hutchison said there had been no decision as to which magistrate will preside but it will likely be Judge Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre or Judge F. S. Green.

A total of 43 warrants was issued for Vancouver Islanders before the national crackdown began last Thursday.

First to be sentenced was 26-year-old Norman George Urquhart, who was jailed for six years for trafficking in heroin.

Others charged with trafficking in narcotics are John Sinker, Dale E. Barber, Gerald T. Zaleschuk, David J. Petrie, Kenneth Raymond Robinson, Stephen C. Dennison, James Page, Lee A. Morran, Amarjeet Lagah, Robin John Van Hecke, Robert S. Taylor and Arthur Spelman.

New Court Open Early Next Year

The crush of cases in the criminal court section of the Victoria provincial court will be relieved with the opening of a new courtroom early in the new year.

Victoria's finance committee recommended Thursday that the contract for alterations and additions to the provincial court building at 633 Fisgard go to H. E. Fowler and Sons Ltd., the low bidder at $71,952.

"I would guess construction would be about three months so we could anticipate the opening of the new building early next year," said city manager Bill Hooson.

Provincial court clerk Robert Davidson said the courtroom will be situated where the clerks' office is located and a new clerks' office will be added to the back of the building overlooking Centennial Square.

It will be used primarily as a trial court and will be directed by the larger criminal court upstairs, said Davidson.

Public seating facilities will allow for about 20 people. Accommodation for more people will not be necessary because only those concerned with the trial will likely attend, said Davidson.

The overload of criminal court cases "has never been this bad," he said, "if this had been on the way this week's narcotics cases could have been put on in the new court."

Undecided Voted NDP UVic Survey Shows

B.C.'s New Democratic government may have been elected by persons who did not vote in the 1969 election, a survey shows.

The Social Sciences Research Centre at the University of Victoria has completed preliminary analysis of a 30 per cent response rate to 500 questionnaires sent out to find out about influences on voting behavior.

Dr. Daniel Koenig, who conducted the survey with colleague Gary Martin, said Thursday the 1969 abstainers were nearly all old enough to vote.

Most of them were undecided about how they would vote, or whether they would vote before the writ was issued for the provincial election this year.

"Of the group of voters who were undecided about their voting intention before the campaign began, 56 per cent eventually voted NDP, accounting for 22 per cent of the total number of NDP voters," he said.

Although the NDP retained the support of most of those who voted NDP in 1969, the Liberals lost the support of half of their 1969 supporters within the sample, with 30 per cent shifting to the NDP in 1972, Dr. Koenig said.

The report shows that 60 per cent of those who voted Progressive Conservative, and 30 per cent of those who voted Liberal in the 1972 election had voted Social Credit in 1969.

Dr. Koenig said the intention of the survey was not to predict election results, but rather to explain them.

When the respondents were asked how they would vote if the federal election was held at that time, late August, the results showed: Liberal 31 per cent; NDP 26 per cent; Conservatives 15 per cent; Social Credit three per cent. Twenty-five per cent were undecided.

On the basis of his figures and referring only to the popular vote, Dr. Koenig said the contest in B.C. would appear to be between the Liberals and the NDP.

Dr. Koenig is planning to send out a second set of more than 1000 questionnaires to randomly selected voters, asking further questions.

Construction Contracts Set

Public Works Minister Bill Hartley has announced contracts awarded to two Victoria construction companies for government projects.

E. J. Hunter and Sons Ltd. has been awarded a $29,620 contract for renovations and extensions to the central microfilm bureau in the Provincial Museum building.

Council Chambers 'Misused'

Federal politicking in Oak Bay's municipal hall has raised the hackles of at least two Victoria federal candidates.

The taxpayer has more than a normal interest in the election. He's Clifford Stretch, Social Credit candidate for the Victoria riding.

Stretch's visit to the hall was triggered by the news that Liberal candidate David Groos had rented the chambers Thursday night.

Stretch says, "It's absolutely wrong. It's a flagrant misuse of the council chambers to have them being used for slanted politics."

He contends that party politics, whether on a gratis or rented level, should not enter the council chambers unless Oak Bay taxpayers are asked in a plebiscite whether or not they are in favor.

He tells of today's encounter with municipal administrator E. H. Hart:

"He told me that he had already arranged for the chambers to be rented to the Conservatives for a coffee party next week and I insisted that this was showing favoritism."

(Conservative candidate Allan McKinnon, contacted earlier, had said he didn't know that the chambers were available to him. His committee had made arrangements to rent the smaller Windsor Park pavilion for a coffee party on Tuesday.)

"It's possibly the method members of the Liberal establishment act towards each other. Not being a member of the select group we didn't know the municipal hall was available," he said.

Stretch said his meeting with Hart this morning was anything but a calm one:

"Mr. Hart said I was losing his vote on account of it and that all the press was interested in was selling papers."

Stretch added: "I've never heard of such a terrible thing as using municipal halls for politicking. It's just as bad as if the NDP or Social Credit used the Newcombe auditorium for all their meetings."

Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford, said the rental procedure had been in effect ever since the hall was built and was available to any organization.

PETERSON GOES BACK TO LAW

Former Attorney-General Leslie Peterson announced today he is rejoining his old Vancouver law firm, but left his options open concerning any provincial byelections or his future leadership of the Social Credit party.

Peterson said he is going back to the firm of Boughton, Street, Collins, Dunfee, Craig and Mortimer where he will be a senior partner. He was with the firm before he entered politics in 1956.

Peterson said it is "necessary to earn a living" but said he will not make a firm decision on running in a provincial byelection until a seat becomes vacant.

He said he is "honored" by the invitiation from former premier Bennett that Peterson run in Bennett's South Okanagan riding and become the next Socred leader.

"But the fact is that there is no seat available," Peterson said. "When a seat does become available, I will be prepared to answer the question at that time."

'Skin-Saving' Socreds Back NDP

By BRIAN BUTTERS and CLEMENT CHAPPLE

The NDP government got unexpected support from the Social Credit party Thursday when the legislature adopted the speech from the throne.

In what Premier Barrett termed an exercise in "political skin-saving," the 10 Socreds rose with the NDP when the vote was taken. The Liberals and Progressive Conservatives opposed the motion.

Opposition Leader W. A. C. Bennett had a different reason for the Socreds' support — he called it an example of "co-operation and goodwill" by his party.

The debate on the speech from the throne took a total of seven hours, with speakers from all four parties participating.

It included defeat of a non-confidence motion from the Socreds, which expressed regret that the speech did not contain legislation for producing jobs, for encouraging secondary industry and for the promotion of B.C. agricultural products.

The vote on the amendment resulted in the combined opposition parties voting against the government.

The two-day debate was highlighted by criticisms from both sides of the house of the arguments put forward, particularly with respect to statements made by Premier Barrett about the government's intended takeover of B.C. Tel and two gas transmission companies.

Industrial Development Minister Alex Macdonald said during the debate Thursday that B.C. should perhaps have an "economic advisory council" to help create economic policies for the province.

Macdonald said the idea is not government policy but the government wants a discussion of the whole problem of industry and employment and must come up with some new "appraisal procedure."

Macdonald said he believes it is important not to rush into industry aid programs without research and planning.

"We want to know the kinds of industry that should be helped," Macdonald said.

Phyllis Young (NDP — Vancouver Little Mountain) told the legislature the time has come for a major study to be made of the significance of jobs.

In her first address to the house, Ms. Young said a job should not necessarily have to produce a profit for someone, that it should instead be designed to create some social gain.

With an expanding labor force and a diminishing job market, she said, the time must be taken to find out what role jobs are to play in the future of the province.

In response to criticism from the opposition parties that the government had included nothing in the throne speech dealing with jobs, Ms. Young said there has not been time in the 35 days since the government took office to create a blueprint for jobs.

Allan Williams (L — West Vancouver-Howe Sound) called for the government to establish a legislative committee to meet representatives of labor and business to discuss the future of the province in terms of what is necessary to keep it moving.

Williams said the place to

Striker Welfare On Way

Rehabilitation Minister Norman Levi said Thursday the NDP government will introduce legislation next spring that would allow for welfare payments to striking and locked-out workers.

Levi made the statement in the legislative corridors when commenting on a Supreme Court of Canada ruling that such workers are not entitled to payments under B.C.'s present legislation.

Levi said that the government is committed to providing welfare when there is need, and the fact that workers are locked out or striking should not affect the definition of need.

The court ruling came in the case of Ross Alden, a Vancouver insulation mechanic whose lawyer was former NDP leader Tom Berger, now a B.C. Supreme Court judge.

Lewis Predicts NDP Gains

Times News Services

Lewis "has struck a note that others have been forced to respond to," said T. C. Douglas, former NDP leader and candidate for re-election in Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands, when he welcomed Lewis to Nanaimo.

"We are doing very well across the country," Lewis said, predicting many more New Democrats will be elected to the Commons in the Oct. 30 general election. The NDP had 25 MPs at dissolution.

Today Lewis continued his tour of B.C. making stops at Port Alberni and Vancouver.

At Rimouski, Que., Real Caouette, federal Social Credit leader, was challenged by a heckler who said separation from Canada is the only route for Quebec to follow.

"Everybody knows Quebec is not a province like the others just as Alberta is different from Nova Scotia and Ontario is different from Newfoundland," Caouette said.

"We must give the provinces the liberty to act within Canada, while providing them with the means to do so."

The whole wrangle over bilingualism could be resolved if the federal government made sufficient subsidies available to the provinces so that both languages could be taught from Grade 1, he added.

One journalist with the Stanfield party, Wang Chang-Yun of the New China News Agency, was not permitted to make the journey from Charlottetown.

Conservative party officials said Wang, who represents the official mainland Chinese news agency, was refused entry by U.S. immigration officials.

Meanwhile, Prime Minister Trudeau has told his former cabinet colleague Eric Kierans that he should continue to work within the Liberal party to seek to persuade more Liberals to accept the Kierans' point of view.

"But I hope that you will not take a lack of agreement with your point of view on a given issue as an indication of any less concern for the integrity of Canada than that which you yourself possess," said the prime minister in a letter released Thursday.

He released the text of his reply to a letter he received last week from Kierans.

War to Death In Ulster, Craig Vows

Times News Services

"We are going to war in Ulster," a hardline Protestant leader said Thursday in London, and 1,000 more people will die in the embattled province between now and Christmas, he added.

William Craig, a former cabinet minister in Ulster's suspended government said he and his supporters were willing "to fight to the death" to preserve Ulster's British heritage.

"The future of Ulster will be decided by bullets — not ballots," he told a Conservative Club meeting.

"We are set on a course of civil war so horrible that you and I can hardly understand it," he told his stunned audience.

Craig added that "without boasting I can mobilize tomorrow 80,000 men who will not see any compromise in Ulster."

Bitter reaction to Craig's hour-long harangue came from all circles including other members of his ultra-right-wing Protestant Vanguard Movement.

One other leader of the movement described the speech as "the language of lunacy."

Meanwhile, Reuters news agency said there was a report, which sources close to the British army said probably was true, that Protestants of the UDA indulged in collusion with members of the IRA, which draws its support from the Roman Catholic community. The UDA denied the report.

Reuters quoted reliable sources as saying that UDA leaders and representatives of the Official wing of the IRA arranged a meeting in a Belfast hotel last Sunday.

But the meeting — at which both sides were said to have reached agreement on the necessity to end middle class domination of politics in Ulster — was also reported to have been infiltrated by the more militant provisional wing of the IRA.

The Provisionals are actively fighting British forces but the officials still are respecting a truce reached last summer.

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Most restaurant prices in Victoria and Vancouver will go up 10 per cent next week on the day the provincial government raises the minimum wage to $2 per hour.

When the minimum wage goes to $2.25 per hour on Jan. 1, 1974, menu prices will likely go up an additional 5 per cent, plus another 5 per cent when it goes to $2.50 per hour in June, 1974.

Gordon Schoor, president of the Victoria and Southern Vancouver Island branch of the Canadian Restaurant Association, said today restaurants were faced with a choice of raising prices or cutting staff.

He said the decision to raise menu rates was taken at a meeting in Vancouver of mainland and Vancouver Island restaurant officials.

Marcos Planning Power for Life

By LEE LESCAZE
Washington Post

HONG KONG — President Ferdinand Marcos will have the legal authority to rule the Philippines as long as he chooses and there never need be future national elections, according to a key article of the nation's new draft constitution, the Washington Post learned Thursday.

The article also specifically gives constitutional approval to all Marcos' decrees issued in the almost four weeks since he imposed martial law throughout the Phillipines.

The martial law administration has made no public announcement about the article, which appears to observers to be the ultimate result of Marcos' many months of work to get a new constitution to his liking drafted by the constitutional convention.

Before martial law, the convention was moving very slowly toward completing its work, and there was widespread speculation that it was under pressure from the president to extend all present terms of office until 1975.

It appears that convention work has been greatly speeded since martial law was imposed and the new "transitory provisions article" would extend all terms indefinitely. The article was passed by a convention committee Tuesday and will be submitted to the full convention next week, according to well-informed sources.

Ballard Jailed

TORONTO (CP) — Harold Edwin Ballard, president of Maple Leaf Gardens and a governor of the National Hockey League, was sentenced today to three years in Kingston penitentiary.

Ballard, 69, was sentenced to three years on each of two counts — one of theft and one of fraud — involving 47 individual charges.

The president of the Toronto Maple Leaf hockey club will serve a total of three years since the sentences run concurrently.

Your Federa Candidates

HANSEN

By ROGER STONEBANKS
Times Staff

The New Democratic Party has never won Victoria federal constituency.

But that isn't daunting 25-year-old Flemming Hansen, the Danish-born University of Victoria economics and political science student now working full-time on the campaign.

He points to steadily increasing party support over the last decade which reached 9,414 votes in the 1968 election, or 20 per cent of the total constituency votes cast.

He describes the improvement as "from hopeless to at least a respectable third" and the party's 1968 showing was "despite Trudeaumania."

Sitting beneath a poster headed Relevant Socialism, with photographs of former NDP-CCF leaders J. S. Woodsworth, M. J. Coldwell and T. C. Douglas, he adds: "If that trend continues . . ."

To Hansen, sincere, quick-spoken and brimming with enthusiasm, "it looks damn good. The question is: Is it enough to win. We have got to pick up 4,000 to 5,000 votes to win."

He predicts that David Groos, the Liberal who won in 1968 with 18,401 votes, will lose at least 5,000 to 6,000 votes.

"I think I've got a good chance of picking them up," he said.

Hansen predicts the Progressive Conservatives will remain "fairly stable;" making Groos the "man to beat." In the last election, the Tories polled 13,578 votes.

Hansen, however, doesn't emphasize his chances of success. It was his last commment, in response to a question,

LINDHOLM
Esquimalt-Saanich

By GEORGE OAKE
Times Staff

The color co-ordinated anteroom of Pearlman and Lindholm, barristers and solicitors, has the rich texture of an Amazon rain forest. Wood and stone meld with yellow broadloom producing what can only be described as the opulence of the law.

Even the receptionist's dress is co-ordinated.

When the muted telephone gives forth with its gurgling birdsong one half expects to see a brilliant macaw fly out of the indirect lighting.

All this is the lair of Esquimalt-Saanich Liberal candidate Louis Lindholm — a senior partner in Vancouver Island's largest law firm — and a man who wants to go to Ottawa in the worst way.

"I've had a fair output out of this community so I feel it is my social, personal responsibility to put an input back into it," Lindholm said.

That's the kind of statement a good courtroom lawyer like the Liberal candidate could dissect in a few minutes of cross-examination. But political pablum or not, the candidate has had a fork in a number of local pies.

As president of the Victoria Bar Society, a six-year director of Kiwanis Village — "That's a million dollar complex which is giving shelter and comfort to the aged" — and president of the Saanich Peninsula Hospital Society, Lindholm has paid his community dues.

A cynic might add that such dues reap political receipts,

Hire More French—Report

By CLANDE LEMELIN

MONTREAL — Canadians who do not speak French would only get 15 per cent of the high-level government appointments during the next three years if Ottawa pursues its official goals on bilingualism.

This explosive conclusion highlights a secret treasury board report on language patterns in the so-called "mandarin class" that rules the public service.

The report states that bilingual percentage targets for 1975 announced last year by treasury board president C. M. Drury cannot possibly be met unless the government orders a complete reversal of the French-English ration in its recruiting.

"Despite all the directives on bilingualism and all the controversy since 1966, we have been unable to find any significant progress in the executive category of the public service," the document says.

The crash program is needed "urgently" to give French-Canadians more senior appointments and to promote four times fewer officials who speak English only over the next three years, the task force concludes.

Copies of this report and of several others drafted by treasury board officials during the past six months were obtained by the Montreal newspaper Le Devoir and the findings were made available to the Victoria Times.

Officials examined the implications of a statement of government policy that Drury made in the House of Commons March 9, 1971.

The minister announced that by 1975, at least 60 per cent and perhaps more of senior officials in the national capital region and in about 50 bilingual districts to be designated later will have to be bilingual.

For administrative and outside jobs, the target was set at 50 per cent; for secretaries and other support staff, 35 per cent; for professionals, scientists and technicians, 15 per cent.

In a report dated May 27, 1972, the task force stated that the "bilingual ratio" in the executive category stood at 32.6 per cent at the end of last year and that the figure
